Traffic slides through first snowfall

A Herald Staff Report

The first snowfall of the year snarled traffic in the Northwest suburbs and provided the first opportunity to pinpoint the places in the area you shouldn't drive on a day like yesterday.

In some locations, suburban motorists found themselves stranded for up to two hours, as highway crews struggled to clear snow faster than it fell. Expressway driving was hazardous Friday night as thousands of commuters forged through 3 to 4 inches of snow on their trip home.

The lucky commuters were the riders of the Milwaukee Road and the Chicago and North Western where no major delays were reported.

But if you were driving, particularly in several areas of the Northwest suburbs, there were some spots which were hazardous during this first major snowfall of the season. Local officials and motorists say it's the same story in these locations during every snow.

IF YOU STAYED clear of them this time, you were fortunate. Here's a report on some of the ones you have to look out for next time.

The much traveled Dundee Road through Arlington Heights, Buffalo Grove and Wheeling and Golf and Higgins roads in Hoffman Estates and Schaumburg are the most treacherous. Although all are major four-lane roadways, a combination of too many cars and the inability to remove snow rapidly make those roads nearly impassable during rush hours.

Traffic Friday morning was backed up for 2½ hours on Dundee Road between Wolf and Buffalo Grove roads in Buffalo Grove. "It was worse than the Dan Ryan Expressway," said Buffalo Grove Police Sgt. Peter Lippert. "It was a parking lot."

Wheeling Police Sgt. Jack Kimsey said there were six minor accidents in the village Friday morning, including a four-car pileup at Wheeling and Dundee roads. There were no injuries, he said, "just an inconvenience for the people involved."

Among the most treacherous intersections reported Friday by police were:

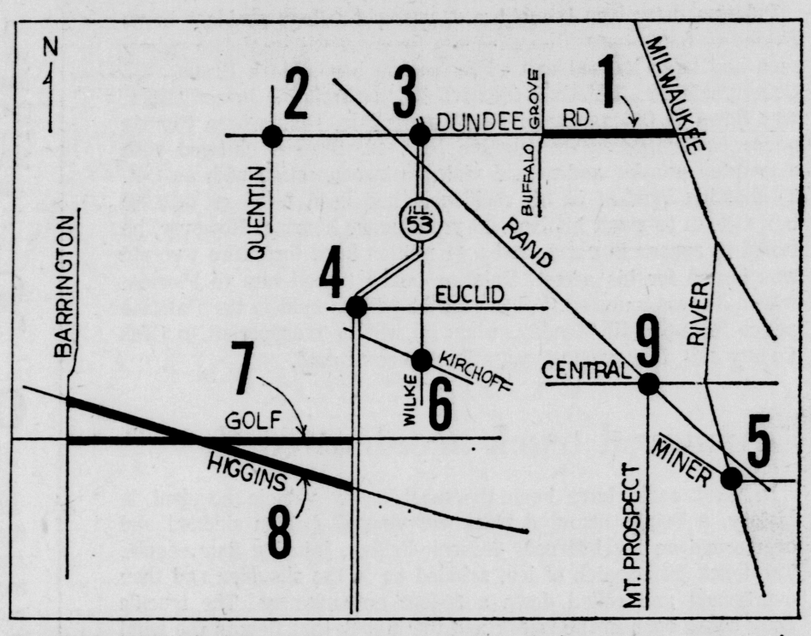
- Dundee and Quentin roads in Palatine.
- Ill. Rte. 53 and Euclid Avenue in Arlington Heights.
- River Road and Miner Street in Des Plaines.
- Kirchoff and Wilke roads in Rolling Meadows.
- Nerge and Rohlwing roads in Elk Grove Village.

Other road hazards created by ice and snow were:

- Dundee Road between Buffalo Grove Road and Milwaukee Avenue in Buffalo Grove and Wheeling.
- Golf Road between Barrington Road and Ill. Rte. 53 in Hoffman Estates-Schaumburg area.
- Higgins Road between Barrington Road and Ill. Rte. 53 in Hoffman Estates-Schaumburg.
- The intersection of Rand, Central and Mount Prospect roads in Mount Prospect.

Travelers' advisories issued throughout the day by the National Weather Service did not stop suburbanites from hitting the roads.

Motorists' troubles in the Rolling Meadows area were compounded by a minor fire in a Commonwealth Edison substation causing a power failure that knocked out traffic signals in portions of the city and Schaumburg Township.



PLACES NOT TO BE when it snows. Some of the worst spots in the Northwest suburbs are: 1) Dundee Road between Buffalo Grove Road and Milwaukee Avenue; 2) Quentin and Dundee roads; 3) Dundee and Ill. Rte. 53; 4) Rte. 53 and Euclid Avenue; 5) Miner Street and River Road; 6) Kirchoff and Wilke roads; 7) Golf Road between Barrington Road and Rte. 53; 8) Higgins Road between Barrington Road and Rte. 53; 9) the three-way intersection of Central, Rand and Mount Prospect roads, Mount Prospect.

Caucus blanked trying to recruit village hopefuls

BY BILL HILL
A news analysis

The Arlington Heights Caucus, a 20-year-old political force in the village, is having problems finding candidates to slate following the defeat of caucus backed candidates in 1975.

Only a handful of prospective candidates have been recruited forcing Wallace Daughtry, caucus chairman, to call on about 40 "influential" people this weekend in hopes of finding more candidates.

The public meeting, where the caucus slate of candidates is selected, probably will have to be moved from Jan. 9 to Jan. 16 because of the slow response to caucus recruiting, Daughtry said.

Daughtry said the caucus' candidate review committee is about two weeks behind schedule and will begin interviewing applicants this weekend.

THE FIRST DAY for filing nominating petitions for the April 5 election is Dec. 27 (the deadline is Jan. 31). Four trustee posts and the village president's position will be contested this year.

The caucus' troubles may be magnified by the fact the only trustee to announce is Alfred J. Barboro, who was endorsed by the caucus in 1975 when he was unsuccessful in his bid for a seat on the board. Barboro is undecided whether he will ask to be on the caucus slate this year. Barboro was named to the board in February 1976 when Alice Harms resigned.

Daughtry said Friday he is hopeful the candidate review committee will interview at least 50 prospects.

"I think a lot of people are waiting to see if the caucus gets glued back together into an operable force," Daughtry said about the slow emergence of candidate prospects. Only one caucus candidate, Trustee Made-

MANY NORTHWEST suburban roads were turned into parking lots Friday as winter's first major snowfall caused havoc among motorists as well as state, county and local road crews responsible for clearing the fluffy white stuff off the streets.

Carter names Vance, Lance to top posts

by WESLEY G. PIPPERT

PLAINS, Ga. (UPI) — Jimmy Carter announced Friday his secretary of state will be Cyrus Vance, a seasoned diplomatic negotiator and Washington insider, and his budget director will be Atlanta banker Thomas Bertram Lance, an old chum and business associate.

Calling his first cabinet-level appointments "superlative" choices, Carter also told a news conference he probably will have to take special steps, quickly, to revive the economy — but he has not decided whether that will include a tax cut or other types of action.

In any case, he said, he has "no intention" of asking Congress for authority to order anti-inflationary wage-price controls, because even "the threat" of such controls can scare industries into protective price hikes. He cited the new rise in steel prices as an example and said he tried, through intermediaries, to prevent it.

THE PRESIDENT-ELECT held his third post-election news conference to introduce Vance, a former deputy defense secretary, as the "level-headed, competent . . . superb negotiator" he has tapped for secretary of state, and millionaire "Bert" Lance as his choice to direct the White House Office of Management and Budget.

"I believe the nation can be reassured that at least in these two appointments the choices have been superlative," Carter said. "I have complete confidence in these two men."

The nominees accompanied Carter to the news conference and fielded some questions, each calling the opportunity to serve in Carter's administration "a privilege and an honor."

David Griffin won't seek reelection

Village Trustee David Griffin announced Friday he will not seek reelection in the Arlington Heights municipal elections in April.

Griffin, 38, of 715 E. Appletree Ln., cited family and business commitments as his reasons for not seeking a second term on the board.

Griffin, an unsuccessful candidate for village president in 1975, is one of four trustees whose terms end next spring.

Alfred J. Barboro, who was appointed in February to complete the term of Alice Harms, has announced he will seek election. Trustees Frank Palmatier and Richard Durava have not announced their intentions. Village Pres. James T. Ryan also has not said whether he will seek reelection.

David Griffin

Griffin was slated by the Arlington Heights Caucus as a trustee candidate in 1973 and was a surprise winner of the Caucus' nomination for the village president's race in 1975. Griffin lost that race to Ryan by about 1,000 votes with about 45 per cent of the vote.

"That campaign was one of the greatest experiences of my life. It was a terrific campaign in which we addressed a lot of issues. That's the way it should be," Griffin said.

Griffin said he has seen "more openness" on the board and a change in its philosophy in recent years. "In the past two years executive sessions have been held to a minimum and the board has made much more significant commitment to commercial and industrial development in this town," he said.

Yuletide music nostalgia makes you sing the blues

WICHITA, Kan. (UPI) — Christmas might be a lot less depressing to many people if radio stations would play fewer sad, nostalgic songs such as "Silent Night" and "White Christmas," according to mental health officials.

But a campaign by Sedgwick County mental health workers to get local radio stations to play more upbeat tunes like "Jingle Bells" has not had much success with station program directors so far.

Several program directors said they were sympathetic with the intent but reluctant to tamper with tradition.

"What would Christmas be without 'Silent Night' or 'White Christmas?'" said Larry Scott, program director for KFDI.

Clarice Harris, director of the county's North Mental Health Center, said the emphasis on family activities and having fun during the Christmas season can be depressing for people who are alone.

THE GOAL IN approaching radio stations about Christmas carols is to make them aware of the sometimes negative effects music can have, she said.

"We follow traditions without much thought of how they may be affecting others," she said.

At the request of one station contacted early by the health workers, a set of broad guidelines were written including examples of sad and happy songs. The guidelines suggested that a slow tempo, minor keys and organ music can prompt sadness.

Employe-hopefuls must resign posts

Des Plaines employes must resign or request a leave of absence if they intend to run for office in next April's election, City Atty. Charles Hug said. In a legal opinion, Hug told city workers they could face dismissal if they run for mayor, clerk, treasurer or alderman while working at city jobs. The opinion affects at least two city employes, Police Det. Herbert H. Volberding and public works employe Walter Cloutier. They both intend to run for mayor. Cloutier Friday said he will seek a leave of absence from his position, but Volberding said he has no intention of resigning or requesting a leave of absnece before running for the city's top post.

Breuer held in Palatine jail

Palatine detectives brought a 22-year-old village resident home Friday to face charges he allegedly fired a shotgun at two policemen and later jumped bail while free on bond. Mark Breuer, 915 Countryside Dr., Palatine, escorted by two Palatine investigators, was flown to Chicago from Fort Lauderdale, Fla., where Florida police had captured the fugitive Nov. 23. Breuer, charged with attempted murder and armed violence in connection with an Oct. 20 shooting incident at his residence, had been freed on $150,000 bail Oct. 21 to await his Nov. 18 preliminary hearing. However, he failed to appear in court, and a $1 million bond forfeiture warrant was issued for his arrest. Palatine police traced him to Florida, where he was arrested. Police said he will be held in the Palatine police lockup until Monday, when he will be transported to Cook County Jail, Chicago, to await a Dec. 16 court date.

Armored truck accident costly

In what could have been the most costly vehicle accident in history, a Brinks armored truck carrying $7 million skidded and overturned on icy I-94 near Antioch Friday, injuring four people. The truck hit a patch of ice, skidded on to the shoulder and then overturned and rolled down a 30-foot embankment. The truck's body broke open in the wreck and the money that flew in the wind created quite a gapers block. Company officials said the money lost in the accident was minimal, but the truck, which was destroyed, was valued at $30,000. The driver and three guards in the truck were knocked unconscious and admitted to St. Therese's Hospital, Waukegan, all in satisfactory or good condition.

Fashing pleads innocent

A 36-year-old Palatine man charged with the attempted murder of his wife pleaded innocent Friday morning in Cook County Circuit Court. William E. Fashing, 607 S. Stuart Ln., appeared in the Evanston branch of Cook County Circuit Court to answer charges of attempted murder and arson. Fashing Oct. 4 allegedly planted a homemade bomb in a car owned by his wife, Geraldine, 32, while the auto was parked in Arlington Heights. The bomb detonated prematurely, inflicting minor burns on Fashing. Police arrested Fashing Oct. 6 after a search of his garage produced what police said were components used to manufacture a bomb. The components matched those found at the scene of the explosion, investigators said.

Agents have 400 buys on tape

'Fence' closes, arrests made

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (UPI) — More than 100 thieves in a three-state area thought for nine months they had a safe "fence" where they could sell stolen goods until the "proprietors," FBI and local authorities, stopped posing as crooks and began arresting them Friday.

Undercover agents bought nearly $1 million in stolen goods at a South Bend warehouse they called SPD, Inc. (for Stolen Property Depository), and known as "The Place" among thieves.

More than 400 buys from 160 persons were secretly videotaped, and sound-recorded, authorities said.

ARRESTS BEGAN before dawn. By noon about 60 persons had been arrested, part of the crop named in 89 warrants, and were being processed at a National Guard center set up just for them.

They were taken by police wagonload to jails and courts.

A spinoff was the recovery of weapons linked to the Oct. 6 slayings of a woman in Hammond, Ind., and a Chicago man who police said was her boy friend. She was identified as Robin Opfer, 21, Chicago; he as Scott Moore, Chicago. Moore's body was found a week after hers, but he was believed to have been slain the same day in a possibly drug-related scheme.

"We just put the word out on the street and they started coming" to the near downtown warehouse from Indiana points and from Illinois and Michigan, state police Lt. Robert Allen said in Indianapolis.

THEY WERE MOSTLY "independent operators," not organized crime figures, he said. Authorities said most of them were "small-time repeaters."

"This is one of the most successful operations of its type that has been carried out," O. Franklin Lowie, special agent in charge of the Indianapolis FBI office, told reporters.

"It was the largest state police force ever gathered for a criminal activity," Indiana State Police Supt. Robert L. DeBard said.

Authorities were hoping to return more than 90 per cent of the loot to victims and insurance companies, South Bend Police Chief Michael Borkowski said.

One example was 58 typewriters taken from a typing classroom of Concord High School south of Elkhart. "The Place" bought them all. Other loot ranged from credit cards and hospital equipment to vehicles and electronic gear.

About $60,000 from federal Law Enforcement Assistance Administration grants to the state police and from the budgets of South Bend and its sister city, Mishawaka, were spent in paying 7-10 cents on the dollar to buy goods valued at more than $900,000, authorities said.

Police 'marriage patrol' to let wives see the beat

LOCKPORT, N.Y. (UPI) — The divorce rate among police officers is one in five in this Niagara County city just a few miles east of the twin honeymoon capitals of Niagara Falls, N.Y., and Niagara Falls, Canada.

So Police Chief J. Paul Leyden has come up with a plan he hopes will cut down on marriage difficulties. Starting next month, officers' wives will be allowed to ride with their husbands in patrol cars.

Leyden Friday said he wants to let the women "see exactly what a policeman deals with during his shift."

LEYDEN SAID police officers have a divorce rate of 25 per cent nationally "and even in Lockport, our rate is near 20 per cent."

"A little understanding, both ways, between husband and wife, is needed to make a marriage work," Leyden said.

The chief said he got the idea from a psychologist who was a marriage counseler for the Los Angeles Police Dept.

The experimental program will be voluntary, Leyden said, but it is designed to help wives see "all the garbage we often get every day."

EACH PARTICIPATING wife will ride from police headquarters twice during the program for an average of about three hours in the patrol car. If a husband is a detective or radio operator, he will switch with a patrolman for a "time on the beat," Leyden said.

He said the wives will be asked to fill out an unsigned form expressing their thoughts after the program ends.

Leyden said most of Lockport's 50 policemen are married and "after this experience with their wives, we expect the results to make this department a little happier place to work."

Student reveals details of rape in county jail

by STEVE BROWN

A Des Plaines student is revealing the grim details of a four-day sodomy and assault ordeal which allegedly took place in Cook County Jail last month to State's Atty. Bernard Carey and a prison reform group.

The 18-year-old high school senior has told authorities that he was raped, assaulted and abused for four days by four jail inmates in early November.

A spokesman for Carey declined to offer any details on the case, except to say there was a complaint and there is an investigation.

JAMES SWANSON of the John Howard Assn., a prison reform group, said the student has provided the group with information about the incident. He probably will be called next week to testify before a Cook County Grand jury that is investigating conditions at the jail.

Swanson termed the young man's willingness to discuss the brutality at the jail "pretty rare."

"This is very unusual. As in other rape cases, most people are too embarrassed or emotionally unable to talk openly about the situation," Swanson said.

The identity of the man is being withheld by authorities, but sources said he was sent to jail Oct. 30 after being arrested on battery, robbery, and aggravated assault charges.

"He was placed in a youth dormitory, which houses males between the ages of 18 to 26 years old," Swanson said. He added that during the next four days he was assaulted and raped a number of times.

SWANSON SAID the young man also has alleged that he was given marijuana and amphetamines by other inmates.

Swanson said he has identified his attackers at the jail and the information has been given to the state's attorney.

He added that the young man was removed to another section of the jail after repeated complaints to jail officials. His parents were unable to post the bond, which was reduced from $20,000 to $2,500, after the attacks occurred.

Swanson said the student explained the incident to his parents who then contacted attorney Robert Maloney. The incident was related to the John Howard Assn. and the state's attorney's office last week, Swanson said.

MALONEY COULD not be reached for comment Friday.

Swanson said the student also alleged that a friend was assaulted and slashed repeatedly with a homemade knife while attempting to resist a sexual attack at the jail several months ago.

The state's attorney hopes to determine if jail guards were aware of the attacks and how the drugs were smuggled into the jail.

Kerner pension rights reinstated

CARLINVILLE (UPI) — A Sangamon County Circuit Court judge has reinstated the pension rights taken away from the late Otto Kerner after the former governor's conviction in a federal race track bribery case.

The attorney representing the Kerner family, Robert Weiner, Friday said in Springfield the reinstatement of benefits involves more than the $10,000 in pension payments Kerner lost between his conviction in February 1973, and his death earlier this year.

Weiner, who represented Kerner and later Kerner's son, Anton, in the fight over pension rights, said the ruling by Circuit Court Judge Paul Verticchio also restored, retroactively, Kerner's right to hospitalization insurance under the pension system. Kerner had been hospitalized several times before his death in his long bout with cancer.

VERTICCHIO ISSUED his three-page ruling Wednesday, saying Kerner could have lost his pension if he had been convicted before leaving office. But Kerner already was a U.S. Court of Appeals judge when he was convicted of bribery, conspiracy, mail fraud, perjury and income tax evasion.

State law prohibits state officials from receiving pension benefits if they are convicted of felonies related to the misuse of office. The State Employes Retirement System Board canceled pension payments for Kerner under that provision.

But Verticchio ruled that conviction must take place while the person holds office, or else the retirement pay is a vested fund which must be paid out to the official.

Correction

A roll call on the Illinois House vote to restore the death penalty published in Friday's edition of The Herald incorrectly listed State Rep. Eugene Schlickman, R-Alrington Heights, as voting in favor of the measure.

Schlickman opposed the bill. The Herald regrets the error.

High court halts Gilmore execution

by PETER GILLINS

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) —The U.S. Supreme Court Friday thwarted Gary Gilmore's wish to die before a firing squad at dawn Monday by ordering the State of Utah to legally justify his execution.

Gilmore reacted in anger against his mother and the NAACP Legal Defense Fund which filed the appeal that resulted in a 6-3 decision by the high court to stay his execution until the justices review his case.

The condemned man said in a statement issued by his agent that he wanted them to "butt out of my life. It's none of their business. They are all a bunch of cowards."

"IF I HAVE a right to a speedy trial, why don't I have a right to a speedy execution?" he wrote. "I am being held with a sentence to death — not a sentence to do time. My sentence to death expires Dec. 6.

"I don't like the fact that the NAACP associates with my case in any way because they are a phony, Uncle Tom outfit and I am a white man."

Gilmore's lawyer, Ronald Stanger, said Gilmore was disappointed and depressed by the court's action. "He realizes this delay may last for a long, long time," the lawyer said after visiting the condemned man at Utah State Prison.

The stay blocked what would have been the first execution in the United States since 1967.

STANGER SAID he might seek to have Gilmore's sentence for the slaying of a Provo, Utah, motel clerk tossed out because a 60-day state time limit on the carrying out of executions will have expired Tuesday — the day the high court wants the state to respond.

We haven't decided, but it's a possibiliiy," the lawyer said. "It raises questions about the government waiving his rights. He hasn't waived any of his rights and doesn't think they have any right to either. He doesn't think he should have to languish under these conditions."

The possibility that Gilmore's death sentence might be abrogated if he wasn't executed by Monday originally was raised by Utah County Atty. Noall Wootton, whose office prosecuted him for the slaying last summer of motel clerk Bennie Bushnell.

Most legal authorities disagreed with the prosecutor's argument that delays might result in Gilmore's escaping punishment.

THE CONDEMNED man still faces first-degree murder charges for a second slaying last summer. Gilmore has admitted killing Max Jensen, 24, a service station attendant, on the night before Bushnell's slaying.

When Gilmore first heard of the high court's ruling, "he made a few snide remarks and that was all," according to prison Lt. Richard Barnhard, who is in charge of the isolated cellblock holding the condemned man.

Gilmore, who turns 36 today, asked for permission to phone his mother, Bessie, bedridden with arthritis at a Milwaukie, Ore., trailer court. Warden Sam Smith said he would allow the call if arrangements could be made.

The Supreme Court acted on a 45-page appeal filed for Mrs. Gilmore by lawyers opposed to the death penalty. A similar appeal was rejected by the Utah Supreme Court an hour before the nation's highest court issued the reprieve.

The justices asked the State of Utah to respond by 5 p.m. Tuesday to the stay request filed for Mrs. Gilmore by Anthony Amsterdam, a Stanford University law professor who fought the case which led the U. S. Supreme Court temporarily to outlaw the death penalty in 1972.

The high court was particularly interested in Utah's reaction to charges Gilmore did not intelligently waive his right to appeal after his conviction for the murder of Bennie Bushnell, 25, a motel clerk slain last summer in Provo, Utah.

"A waiver of constitutional rights must be 'competently and intelligently' made," the appeal argued, "and to allow such waiver where there has 'been no hearing or inquiry into the issue of . . . (a defendant's) competence to waive his constitutional rights' constitutes reversible error."

The appeal charged the inquiry by the Utah Supreme Court into the waiver issue was "grossly inadequate."

THE STATE ALSO WAS asked to supply transcripts of four recent proceedings in the case — a Nov. 1 hearing in Fourth District Court at Provo where Gilmore asked for immediate execution, a Nov. 10 hearing before the Utah Supreme Court at which Gilmore personally pleaded for death, last Tuesday's hearing of the Utah Board of Pardons, and Wednesday's sentencing proceedings at which the execution date was set.

Utah Atty. Gen.-elect Robert Hansen said his staff would work through the weekend preparing its response, adding that all the requested information would be ready by the deadline.

Vance a good choice: Kissinger

by United Press International

U. S. Sec. of State Henry Kissinger said Friday Cyrus Vance was "an outstanding choice" to succeed him as the nation's top foreign policy expert and promised his full cooperation during the remaining seven weeks of the transition period.

Vance, the 59-year-old former diplomatic troubleshooter in the Johnson administration, also received high praise from several senators and House members who oversee foreign policy on Capitol Hill.

The U. S. State Dept. released a statement from Kissinger minutes after President-elect Jimmy Carter officially announced Vance's new post during a nationally televised news conference.

"PRESIDENT-ELECT CARTER has made an outstanding choice in choosing Cyrus Vance as his secretary of state," Kissinger said. "I have known Mr. Vance for many years and have had the privilege of working with him. He is exceptionally well qualified for his new responsibilities. I wish him well. His success will be the success of all Americans."

Kissinger also pledged that "my colleagues in the Department of State and I will do everything we can to assist the secretary-designate during the transition period."

Sen. John Sparkman, D-Ala., chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, said in a telephone interview from Huntsville, Ala., that Vance's selection was "a very good one."

"He's had wonderful experience in public service. I think that will be a great help to him. I personally believe he will be quite acceptable to our committee," he said.

REP. CLEMENT J. Zablocki, D-Wis., expected to be named chairman of the House International Relations Committee in the new Congress, said Vance is "a man who is highly respected on Capitol Hill and with whom I am confident the Congress can work cooperatively and well in the national interest."

Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, a member of the foreign relations panel, said he had strongly favored Vance's appointment and was "very pleased" with it.

The ranking Republican member of the committee, Sen. Clifford Case of New Jersey, said he was "greatly pleased" with the appointment."

"I am sure he will carry out the duties of this enormously responsible position with dedication and great competence," said Case.

Sen. Claiborne Pell, D-R. I., another foreign relations panel member, said he was "delighted" with Vance's selection "because he will make an excellent secretary of state."

Quintuplets for 32-year-old British woman

• A 32-year-old British woman Friday gave birth to quintuplets — three girls and two boys. A hospital spokesman said "although they are very small, they are doing well." He said doctors delivered the babies of Helen Miles, of Digswell Hertfordshire, by Caesarian section. The Guinness Book of Records lists two other surviving sets of quintuplets in Britain, against the odds of 60 million to 1.

• Robert Strauss, retiring chairman of the Democratic National Committee, Friday was named to the board of directors of Braniff International.

ney, indicated he will delegate negotiating authority to qualified subordinates much more than Henry Kissinger has done, although he will step in personally when necessary.

HE SAID REVIVAL of progress in the stalled U.S.-Soviet strategic arms talks and the possibility of new U.S.-led peace initiatives in the Middle East were among his highest priorities.

Vance said prospects for strengthening Middle East peace seemed "encouraging," without saying why, and he pledged the strategic arms talks would get his "aggressive attention" right away.

Generally, however, Vance declined to discuss the substance of policy issues, saying he could not do so before he has extensive briefings with Kissinger and other officials. A Kissinger aide said in Washington the two plan to confer at the U.S. State Dept. Monday.

Carter interrupted to say that "most parties to the Middle East situation have expressed themselves . . . that the next few months would be a good time to renew efforts" toward resumed peace negotiations. But he too said it would be "inappropriate" to comment on foreign policy issues in more substance just now, because the "excellent" Ford administration is still in charge.

VANCE IS AN old Washington hand renowned especially as a master bargainer in touchy diplomatic negotiations. He served as Army secretary in the Kennedy administration, as deputy defense secretary under Lyndon Johnson and as a chief U.S. negotiator at the Vietnam peace talks and the 1967 Cyprus talks.

Lance, 45, a bass-voiced, heavy-set man with a cherubic double chin, is president of the National Bank of Georgia which gave the Carter family a multimillion dollar loan for peanut growing equipment in 1975.

Introduced by Carter as "a close personal friend," Lance said the loan was simply a good business venture that involved "no conflict of interest at all" and — like Vance — said he planned to divest himself of all business and financial holdings that might raise conflict-of-interest questions.

Lance said he would run OMB in "a hard-nosed, efficient, businesslike manner," but would not allow it to become "a super-agency to be feared" by the public.

A REPORTER asked Carter whether, in his first cabinet-level selections, he had violated campaign pledges to end cronyism in government and fill key positions with persons from outside the Washington establishment. He noted Lance had personal ties to Carter, and Vance is a familiar figure in elite Washington circles.

Carter denied it, saying both men live and follow careers outside Washington, and that, in Vance's case, it would have been "almost ridiculous" to choose as a secretary of state a man inexperienced in foreign policy conduct.

Mr. Nice Guy Vance part of Eastern Establishment

by United Press International

If Jimmy Carter wanted a secretary of state who epitomizes the Democratic Eastern Establishment, he could not have done better than select Cyrus Roberts Vance, his choice for the job.

Vance, secretary of the Army in the Johnson Administration, is a native of Clarksburg, W. Va., but everything else about him — where he went to school, the people he has worked with, where he has worked — bespeaks the role of a prototype establishment figure.

His personal qualities, on the other hand, are just about the opposite of those of the man he succeeds, the domineering Henry A. Kissinger.

VANCE IS REGARDED by those who have worked with him at the Pentagon and the State Dept. as a team player, considerate, a quiet, good listener, an optimist with an almost uncanny knack of summing up the consensus and coming up with a compromise.

Kissinger was not known for those characteristics.

Vance, 59, looks like what he is — a Wall Street lawyer. Under the Kennedy and Johnson administrations he was a faithful deputy to the giants of the day — Averell Harriman, Robert McNamara and Dean Rusk, all of whom had some influence with Carter during the selection process.

Vance went to all the right Establishment schools — Kent School, Yale and the Yale Law school.

HE WAS A member of Harriman's Paris negotiating team that failed to make any real progress on Vietnam. He was deputy secretary of defense and also served as secretary of the Army when Defense Sec. McNamara and his computers were running the Pentagon.

And Vance was a special negotiator for McNamara in Cyprus and South Korea.

Some officials who have worked with him on these jobs, and respected him, now express doubts whether Mr. Nice Guy, a man who has always been No. 2, is tough enough to master some of the diplomatic, bureaucratic and legislative barriers that confront a secretary of state.

Vance is married to the former Grace Sloane and has four daughters and one son. He has been living in a gracious old Fifth Avenue apartment and has been spending much time recently trying to work out a solution to New York City's financial crisis.

CYRUS VANCE

He recently traveled to the Peoples Republic of China and has worked hard on a United Nations Assn. report which recommended that the United States and the Soviet Union concentrate their disarmament efforts on that area where most money is spent, conventional rather than strategic armaments.

'Country banker' Lance looms big in budget picture

by United Press International

Atlanta banker Bert Lance, President-elect Jimmy Carter's choice as budget director, says any shoring-up of the economy by the new administration will be done in an orderly fashion.

When Lance says it, you're apt to believe it.

The self-styled "country banker" stands 6-4, weighs 240 pounds and has a booming voice.

During the days he ran the Georgia State Transportation Dept. under then-Gov. Carter, he kept his hair cropped short and so did all his aides — although long hair was the vogue.

Lance began his banking career in 1951 as a $90-a-month teller at the First National Bank in his hometown of Calhoun, Ga. Twelve years later he was named president of the bank.

LANCE'S BROTHER-IN-LAW, C. B. David, who still lives in Calhoun, has a ready explanation for Lance's success: "He's always been a hard worker and he survives on hard work."

For the past two years Lance has been president of the National Bank of Georgia, Atlanta's fifth largest, and has gained a reputation as an aggressive businessman by consolidating three smaller banks since he took over the job.

One of the loans Lance made was to peanut farmer Jimmy Carter — a $4.7 million outlay to help finance the Carter family's business enterprise in Plains.

Lance says he sees "no problem" in the fact his bank helped Carter financially.

"It was done back in 1975," he says. "If I had been smart enough to know that he was going to be president of the United States when we negotiated these loans, I'd rather imagine he'd want me to run the whole country."

LANCE RECEIVED high marks for his handling of the Georgia State Transportation Dept. and also played a key role in Carter's reorganization of the state government.

"Whenever Carter wanted something done — anything — he's call on Bert Lance," an insider said.

Lance is married to his high school sweetheart, Labelle, 45, and they have four sons, two of them bankers, and two, ages 15 and 17, still in school. Mrs. Lance's grandfather founded the Calhoun bank, and her father was its vice president.

Lance made an unsuccessful bid for the governorship in 1954, spending more than $1 million on his campaign, only to be defeated in the Democratic primary. He made a financial disclosure at the time showing his net worth at $3.1 million.

Before the formal announcement of his appointment Friday,. Lance said Carter's first concern would be with unemployment, with inflation a close second.

"Whatever action he takes will be an orderly situation" Lance said.

2 seized in nursing home payoff plot

The U.S. attorney's office Friday filed misdemeanor charges against two pharmacists, accusing them of paying kickbacks to Chicago area nursing homes in return for Medicaid business. Norman Jacobson, 37, Northbrook, owner of Blick Pharmacy in Chicago, and Aaron Finn, 63, former owner of the pharmacy, were named in criminal informations — misdemeanor charges filed by the U.S. attorney's office without going through grand jury proceedings. The two were reported to be cooperating with the U.S. attorney's office in a major investigation into Medicaid fraud. Sixteen persons and six medical laboratories are under indictment in the probe.

The criminal charges filed against Jacobson Friday contend he paid $1,739 to various nursing homes in 1975 so they would buy supplies for Medicaid patients from his pharmacy. Finn was accused of making similar payoffs in 1974. Nursing homes which allegedly received the payoffs are: Golf Mill in Niles; Plaza in Niles; Edgewater Center, Chicago; Oak Manor, Chicago; Balmoral, Chicago; Central, Chicago; Wrightwood Convalescent Home, Chicago; and Sheridan Gardens, Chicago.

Ex-cop in beating gets probation

A federal judge, admitting the sentence did not reflect "the enormity of the conduct involved," Friday placed a former Chicago policeman on five years probation in a civil rights case stemming from the beating of two men last year. U.S. District Court Judge Prentice H. Marshall indicated that he imposed a lighter sentence on former officer Richard Gavert because he cooperated with federal authorities in the investigation of the Feb. 2, 1975, beating. Gavert, 34, pleaded guilty on Oct. 21 to violating the civil rights of Gregory Walker and Ralph Cheatem. He was indicted by a federal grand jury Sept. 1 with former patrol officer Robert J. Minster, who pleaded guilty last Monday.

Illinois briefs

Inheritance fee unconstitutional

The Illinois Supreme Court Friday handed down two opinions affecting local government's finances.

One said the 4 per cent "fee" that counties now keep for collecting the state inheritance tax is unconstitutional. The other held that cities are entitled to keep the fines paid for traffic offenses if city police issue the citation and appear in court, even if the state's attorney handles any required court appearances. The inheritance tax ruling found the 4 per cent retention feature of the law violates a constitutional prohibition against basing fees "upon the levy or extension of taxes." The case was filed as a class action affecting all taxpayers outside Cook County. Justice Walter V. Schaefer filed a dissenting opinion saying acceptance of that class action status was improper.

The traffic offense decision resulted from a dispute between the city of Decatur and Macon County. The appellate court had held that in cases where a state's attorney was required to appear in court on a city-initiated traffic case because of the failure of a municipal attorney to do so, the fines resulting from the case would go to the county. The Supreme Court disagreed, holding the appellate court had misinterpreted the word "prosecute" to include all steps in the judicial process, from issuance of the original ticket through the court appearance.

LSD victim must sue: Rep. Simon

U.S. Rep. Paul Simon, D-Ill., said Friday that Kenneth Loeh, Royalton, Ill., who learned only this year he was given LSD in secret Army tests in 1957, apparently will have to take legal action to recover damages. Simon brought Loeh's case to public attention last August. He said he met this week with Army Sec. Martin R. Hoffman and with Loeh's attorneys, John Huffman and Dan Kimmel of Carbondale, Ill. "The secretary expressed a sincere concern about Mr. Loeh's problem," Simon said. "But legal counsel for the Army later told Mr. Loeh's attorneys that he would probably have to sue in order to recover damages. The Army seems unwilling to budget from an apparent legal contention that the tests led to no adverse after-effects." Loeh, 38 and disabled, said in August he had had 28 seizures in the 19 years that followed the tests conducted at a Maryland base in December 1957.

'Haircut' judge suspended

The Illinois Courts Commission has suspended Woodford County Circuit Court Judge Samuel G. Harrod III without pay for one month because he ordered convicted males to get haircuts and seized their driver's licenses. The commission said Friday it agreed with the Judiciary Inquiry Board, which held Harrod, 36, Eureka, Ill., had acted improperly and his conduct tended to bring the judiciary into disrepute. The board accused Harrod of forcing convicted males to cut their hair short and requiring them to surrender drivers' licenses as a condition of probation.

$30.26 million penalty, court rules

Chicago schools must pay fine

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (UPI) — The Illinois Supreme Court ruled Friday the Chicago public schools must pay a $30.26 million penalty for not holding a full school year last year.

But the court agreed the school system can pay the penalty over a three-year period starting this year, rather than immediately in one lump sum.

The decision reverses one handed down by Cook County Circuit Court Judge Arthur Dunne in September. Dunne ruled the penalty invalid on several grounds and said the Chicago schools did not have to pay.

THE DECISION IS important statewide because the reduction in money going to Chicago means more money will be available for distribution through the school aid formula to other districts.

The Chicago School Board's main argument against the penalty was that it violated the section of the 1970 Illinois Constitution which requires that the state "provide for an efficient system of high-quality public educational institutions and services."

The court rejected arguments that the imposition of a penalty would interfere with the provision of high-quality education.

"It seems to us," the opinion said, "that the requirement of a minimum school term is relevant to providing high-quality, efficient education on a statewide basis. Conditioning entitlement to state aid on compliance with minimum term requirements seems to us entirely consistent with the goals set forth in the Constitution and an effective means of enforcing compliance."

Originally the Chicago schools faced a $53.26 million penalty for holding 14 class days less than the required minimum of 176 during the 1975-1976 term. The legislature changed the formula retroactively during its special school aid session earlier this fall.

Kusper to begin recount in 10th

Cook County Clerk Stanley T. Kusper Jr. Friday said the only two election recounts requested by candidates in the Nov. 2 election involve Northwest suburban districts.

Kusper said he will begin a recount in the 5th Legislative District, which includes the southern portion of Des Plaines.

A partial recount will begin Monday in the 10th Congressional District race between U.S. Rep. Abner J. Mikva, D-10th, and Republican Samuel H. Young. The final vote totals gave Mikva a 201 vote plurality.

In the 5th District race, State Rep. Jack B. Williams, D-Franklin Park, finished third, beating Republican Robert Guerine by 1,425 votes.

Kusper will recount votes from 25 selected precincts in the 5th District race and 132 precincts in the 10th District.

If the discovery recount shows a significant change in the vote totals, the candidates can seek a full recount.

25 compete for Junior Miss title

John Schaller, general manager of radio station WWMM-FM, and Karen Leksander, a 1975 Paddock Junior Miss, will be masters of ceremony at Sunday's 12th Annual Paddock Junior Miss Pageant.

Twenty-five Northwest suburban high school senior coeds will compete for two Paddock Junior Miss crowns at the 7 p.m. pageant at the Prospect High School theater, 801 W. Kensington Rd., Mount Prospect.

Scholarships totaling $1,700 will be awarded at the pageant which is affiliated with the Illinois Junior Miss Pageant and America's Junior Miss Pageant planned in Mobile, Ala., in May, which will involve winners from the 50 states.

Serving on the 11-member judges panel are Jane Behrens, an Arlington Heights paralegal secretary; Mary Edgren, director of communications for the Chicago Lung Assn. and communications counselor for the village of Schaumburg; Stan Herman, a director of the Rolling Meadows Chamber of Commerce; Roy Kempa, Mid-America Research Associates.

Also, Tom Lovell, Arlington Heights Rotary Club; Dorothy Meyer, a feature columnist for The Herald; Audrey Reider, a fashion show coordinator and representative of the Junior Women's Club; James Roel, past president of the Des Plaines Optimists Club and Des Plaines Jaycees; Steven Silverman, Kiwanis Club and a volunteer at the Clearbrook Center; Ron Spears, resident manager, B. C. Zeigler & Co.; and Marnie Miller, a public relations representative of Illinois Bell Telephone Company's Arlington Heights and Oak Park district offices.

Sponsors of this year's pageant are Lattof Chevrolet, Arlington Heights, and Colonial Chevrolet, Schaumburg.

Other sponsors include Mount Prospect State Bank, Mount Prospect, and The Crawford Department Store, Rolling Meadows.

Scholarship fund donors include the First National Bank of Mount Prospect, Mount Prospect; Persin and Robbin Jewelers, Arlington Heights; and Northwest Trust and Savings Bank, Arlington Heights.

County, state snow crews battled 'worst conditions'

by DIANE MERMIGAS

The men who man the plows and salt trucks for the Illinois Dept. of Transportation and the Cook County Highway Dept. "were facing the worst conditions that could exist" Friday morning because "we didn't get a big jump on the snow" and "couldn't get the trucks past the cars," said an official of the state highway department.

Both departments had snow removal units on the streets at 6 a.m. to do battle with Ol' Man Winter, but Charles McLean, traffic maintenance director for the Illinois Dept. of Transportation, said there wasn't much advance warning of Friday's snowstorm because of a sudden change in winds coming off Lake Michigan.

"This year the weather has been really erratic. This was our 13th storm warning already this season. Last winter we had a total of 35 storm warnings," he said.

SNOW COMMAND members for both agencies are assigned to salt and plow certain regions. Their job does not end until the pavement is visible and clean and weather conditions have improved.

Both the county and state contract the services of private forecasters who send regular and emergency weather reports into a 24-hour switchboard at the state's headquarters at 100 Plaza Dr., Schaumburg.

When the forecast looks bleak with freezing temperatures, heavy snow and blowing winds, the snow commands are dispatched.

The tactics have been worked out in advance and members of the snow commands are called by phone to duty. Bright orange vests and helmets are donned, snow trucks with flashing lights are revved up, and the troops hit the roads.

THE STATE SENDS out special crews to clear the expressways and tollways for heavy rush-hour traffic.

Major state and county roads which handle a great deal of local and through traffic are cleared early. Those routes include Dundee Road, Elmhurst Road, Northwest Highway, Golf Road, Rand Road, River Road, Higgins Road, Arlington Heights Road and others.

Lesser traveled county roads are cleared last. Manpower and machinery is allocated on the basis of need.

The streets that lead to local fire and police stations and hospitals always are high priority, said Glenn Frederichs, assistant superintendent of the county highway department.

BOTH AGENCIES also give special attention to hazardous road conditions that prevail in different sections of each community at bridges or sharp curves, he said.

Initial thin layers of snow can be salted, but plowing does not ususally begin until two or more inches has accumulated. There are restrictions on salting because certain chemicals must be added to break up the icy snow after temperatures have dropped below 20 degrees, McLean said.

High winds result in drifting that can cover up in minutes what it took a snow plow to clear all morning. With abandoned cars blocking the roadway and the elements of nature working against you, the snow command's job is hardly an envious one, he said.

"We are ready to get those plows rolling from early October and we know we could be using them until after April — we've had snow that late in the season before," said McLean, who supervises a six-county district of snow commands from the state's Schaumburg office.

THE OFFICE IS the main pulse of the state's northeastern Illinois snow plow operation which utilizes 800 men and 360 trucks. Snow command units for the Northwest suburbs are dispatched from maintenance yards at 410 Lincoln Ave., Arlington Heights and 1175 Biesterfield Rd., Elk Grove Village. Each station has 23 to 47 men and 15 to 20 trucks, McLean said.

The county has local dispatching offices at Algonquin and Mecham Roads, Schanumburg, and on Ballard Road in Des Plaines which each have about 11 trucks and 22 men.

The county draws from a total force of 56 trucks and about 112 men for its countywide snow removal program, Frederichs said.

Dist. 23 chiefs hit road for Dec. 11 vote

by SHERYL JEDLINSKI

It's almost like a traveling road show, with two men carting a slide projector, slides, a movie screen and posters from house to house.

The show has been on the road for three weeks now, with administrators and board members in Prospect Heights Dist. 23 sometimes giving four performances a day.

They speak to businessmen, Scout leaders, city councilmen, homemakers and anyone who will listen to their plea for passage of the district's Dec. 11 referendum.

"THE KEY TO a successful referendum is parents," Assistant Supt. Gerald McGovern told his audience of eight women this week. "If the parents are apathetic and don't show up to vote, we'll lose."

Losing will mean having to eliminate or reduce programs in music, art, home economics, industrial arts, physical education, Spanish, band, interscholastic sports and intramurals, Supt. Edward Grodsky told the parents. It will mean increasing the size of classes and dismissing teachers and administrators.

"If we do this, all we'll be left with is the basics and we'll be right back where we were 10 years ago," he said. "We don't want to take a step backwards."

Last April the board made $110,000 in cuts before approving a $2.62 million budget, but were able to save programs and maintain the educational standards of the district, Grodsky said. It won't be that way if the referendum fails and another $200,000 has to be cut from the budget.

FACED WITH a projected $278,000 deficit and already having borrowed as much as allowed legally, the district will have no choice but to make the program and staff cuts, Grodsky said.

Passage of the referendum would allow the board of education to increase the tax rate in the education fund from $1.60 per $100 equalized assessed valuation, where it has been since 1964, to $2.20 per $100, he said.

The 60-cent increase in the education fund would be levied gradually over six years. The over-all tax rate would not increase from $2.51 per $100 equalized assessed valuation because the tax rate in the bond and interest fund would drop as bonds are retired and as the board raised the education fund rate, Grodsky said.

"We're not proposing to raise your taxes one iota," he said. "The amount we would retire in bonds would be reallocated to the education fund and the tax rate would be frozen at $2.51."

Although not a panacea for the financial problems that have plagued the district for the past decade, passage of the referendum would buy time for a district with "its back against the wall," McGovern said.

Columbo marriage plans delayed

by DAVE IBATA

Patricia Columbo and Frank DeLuca, accused in the murder of Miss Columbo's family in Elk Grove Village, have postponed their marriage plans until after their murder trial in Cook County Circuit Court, a defense attorney said Friday.

Assistant Public Defender William Swano said, "any plans for a marriage have been delayed for now. We'd like to get the criminal matter over with before they proceed to marry."

Miss Columbo, 20, and DeLuca, 39, are being held in Cook County Jail, Chicago, in lieu of $250,000 bond. They are charged with the May 4 slaying of Miss Columbo's parents, Frank and Mary Columbo, and her 13-year-old brother, Michael.

THE COLUMBOS lived at 55 E. Brantwood Dr., Elk Grove Village.

Miss Columbo was arrested May 15, and DeLuca July 17, in connection with the murders. They appeared in Judge Philip Romiti's courtroom Friday morning for a pretrial hearing during which defense attorneys requested a delay to allow more time to prepare their case, Assistant State's Atty. Al Baliunus said.

Patricia Columbo

Frank DeLuca

The next court date is Dec. 20 at the Cook County Criminal Courts building, 26th Street and California Avenue, Chicago.

Friday's hearing in the Columbo case was the last for Romiti, who was elected to the Illinois Appellate Court in November. He will hand over the case to another Circuit Court judge Monday, Baliunus said.

COUNTY COURT officials have not announced which judge will be assigned the Columbo case, Baliunus said.

Miss Columbo and DeLuca, meanwhile, have been returned to their separate cells in the county jail.

Miss Columbo and DeLuca, a divorced father of five, reportedly were living together in a Lombard apartment at the time of the murders. DeLuca sent a letter to Judge Richard Fitzgerald of circuit court Sept. 1, asking permission for him and Miss Columbo to be married while imprisoned.

Fitzgerald Sept. 8 gave permission for the marriage. However, a representative of the county marriage bureau was not scheduled to interview them for marriage license applications until January 1977.

line Schroeder, was elected in 1975.

Daughtry also blames residents' satisfaction with the current village government for the lack of candidates at this point.

"MOST PEOPLE ARE pretty happy with the way things are being run and they just don't want to be bothered. We're trying to get the public to be interested in the general welfare of the town and not get complacent," he said.

The main problem faced by the caucus is its image of secrecy, Daughtry said in October when he was first named temporary caucus chairman. He proposed several by-law changes, including one to open caucus meetings to the public and press, but all were rejected at the caucus' first public meeting Oct. 25 which only about 70 residents attended.

Two by law changes were made at that meeting. One change forbids the release of the candidate review committee's recommendations before four days before the public meeting in January. Previously, the recommendations were announced at least 10 days before the slate-making meeting.

That change was made to prevent candidates from "packing" the meeting when a slate is chosen, as was charged in 1975 when David Griffin was picked to run for village president over two candidates recommended by the committee.

THE OTHER CHANGE is an attempt to sidestep the caucus' image problem. Candidates endorsed by the caucus this year will not be allowed to use the word "caucus" in the name of the party they form for the campaign. "That should make some people feel better," Daughtry said. He admits there are residents who are skeptical about the viability of the caucus.

Daughtry said he hopes to project a new image for the caucus, but it's "coming very slowly," he said.

"I think that by January it will be evident because there will be enough candidates that have announced that there will be a lot of talk about the caucus again," he said.

The possible choices to the caucus for village president candidates to oppose James Ryan also appear limited. Griffin, the caucus candidate for the post in 1975, Friday said he will not seek election to the board either as a trustee or as president.

The plans of Trustee Frank Palmatier and former Village Pres. Ralph Clarbour, who were recommended for the village president's post by the caucus' candidate review committee in 1975, are unknown.

A decision by either man to head the slate could bring the caucus alive again.

The way we see it

Praise for the Puritans

Cynicism about government at all levels has become commonplace, and many may have considered this week's report that there is no official corruption in Arlington Heights Village government to be startling news indeed.

Startling or not to the hardened outsider, the report by a professor from the University of Illinois, Chicago Circle, calling the village "a model of puritanical propriety," comes as welcome reassurance to those who have followed the progress of the village government over the years.

The report by John A. Gardiner called "Propriety in Prairieville" points out several specific reasons for Arlington Heights' ability to avoid the kinds of scandals that have touched other communities.

Among the factors involved, Gardiner said, are active citizen participation in the community, high salaries and professionalism in the village staff, and realistic planning and zoning procedures which make "playing by the rules" a habit for developers.

Singled out for praise was Village Mgr. L. A. Hanson, the man who has headed the village administration for nearly 20 years. During that time, the report says, Hanson has been criticized as unresponsive to citizens, but "everyone agrees that he is absolutely honest and firmly in command of village government."

Such a statement is high praise indeed, and reflects well not only on Hanson but on the village boards that over the years have sometimes fought with Hanson but have always kept him in his post.

The report as a whole also reflects with distinction on the service village board members and past village presidents have brought to the community. In addition, although the report does not mention him specifically, it is certain that the leadership former Police Chief L. W. Calderwood provided the police force over the years greatly contributed to the tone of the village.

Arlington Heights' village government has been far more stable than the governments of some suburbs, where village managers have been run through office in revolving door fashion. In some communities, elected officials have assumed that election results gave them a mandate to meddle in even the most minute administrative details of their municipal governments.

At the same time, Arlington Heights officials and residents should realize that just because the village has escaped the perils of corruption so far, they cannot relax their vigilance. Good government is not something that can be achieved and then put on a shelf to admire — it requires constant work by a concerned citizenry.

It would be wrong to attribute Arlington Heights' clean reputation to "luck." It has taken dedication by many citizens, both in government and out.

Arlington Heights will be well served if citizens with similar dedication continue their involvement for many years to come.

You're really catching on to politics fast, baby!

Thompson's pay stand a bad start

The campaign is over, and already it seems as though some promising politicians are changing their spots.

Most particularly, our attention is drawn to Gov.-elect James Thompson, who seemed throughout the campaign to be just the kind of political leader who would shun the shenanigans that are too common in Springfield.

Now, before the election is even a distant memory, Thompson has said he supports a proposal in the legislature to raise the salaries of members of the General Assembly and other state office holders — including the governor.

The pay raise bill will have to be passed by this session of the General Assembly, between now and Jan. 12, if incoming legislators, Thompson and other newly elected officials are to benefit from it. The current proposal calls for legislative salaries of $27,500 a year and a salary for the governor of $70,000.

The total price tag for these raises is more than $7 million. There is talk in Springfield that the legislature will be able to muster the enthusiasm to pass the raises over Gov. Daniel Walker's threatened veto.

Somehow none of this squares with all the predictions, by responsible Democrats and Republicans, that the state will face a severe financial squeeze in the next year and that it will be touch and go if we are to avoid a state tax increase.

Thompson himself has called for a "year of sacrifice" by those who have claims on the state's coffers. Funds for education have been cut and other state agencies will do without because of these sacrifices.

It seems that Thompson and the legislators pushing the pay raise bill plan on having everyone sacrifice but themselves.

We continue to have high hopes for Thompson as governor, but he's gotten off to a bad start on the pay raise issue. We hope he will reconsider his support.

The presidential transition

by HELEN THOMAS

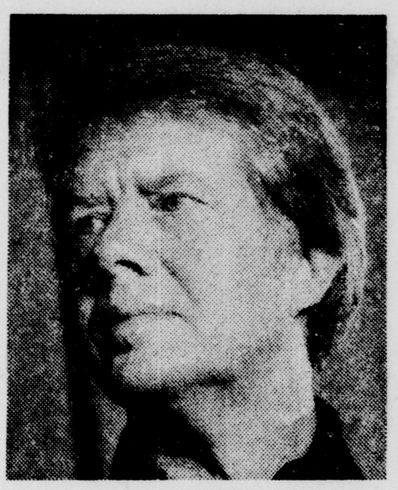
PLAINS, Ga. (UPI) — President-elect Jimmy Carter refuses to be rushed in naming his cabinet and shaping the structure of his administration.

Basically alone at his ranch-style home in Plains, Carter has remained far from the madding crowd and is taking his time — perhaps more than his predecessors — in picking the men and women who will serve in his administration over the next four years.

An aide said Carter is aware the decisions he makes in picking people for top government jobs probably will be the most "critical he will face in the next several months," barring an unexpected crisis.

WITH THE TRAINING of an engineer and a man who approaches problems systematically and methodically, Carter is narrowing the list of candidates, which in the beginning numbered in the hundreds, down to a manageable size.

He has received 15-page biographical and analytical profiles on some of the more prominent contenders for cabinet posts. He also expects to interview personally those he will name to run the departments. Compatibility is one of the key things stressed in Carter's choice of a cabinet. He wants the officials dealing with the economy to work in close cooperation, and the same goes for national security affairs.



PRES.-ELECT JIMMY CARTER

But so far he has given few hints on his line of thinking other than to reassure supporters the makeup of his administration will be broadbased and will include blacks, women and other minority groups who have not played a large role in the past in the top government positions.

CARTER ADMITS he found some of the transition papers presented to him on the presidency are not up to his "standards." He also has had to mediate some of the post-election friction among his closest associates and says there has been some jockeying for power — "not much, but enough."

Oddly enough, Carter has even dipped into Republican ranks to try to learn how to be a good president and to organize the White House. He has asked Stephan Hess, former speech writer for Dwight Eisenhower who also served as Richard Nixon's assistant for urban affairs, to prepare memos for him on how to reshape the White House staff.

Hess, who helped draft the Republican Party's 1976 platform, came to Carter's attention because of the book, "Organizing the Presidency," which he wrote as a senior fellow at the Brookings Institute.

HESS ALREADY has submitted two memos to Carter on staffing and pinpointing those in the palace guard who should have direct access to the president. He is preparing another on the trappings of the presidency — which Carter wants to cut down — and use of the presidential retreat.

Meantime, Carter is being bombarded with suggestions on who to pick for his cabinet and how to run the White House — 5,000 to 6,000 letters a day, he says.

He has received many wires suggesting Rep. Barbara Jordan, D-Tex., be apponted to his top team.

THERE ALSO IS a push for former Rep. Bella Abzug, D-N.Y., who lost out to Daniel Patrick Moynihan for the New York senatorial seat, to be given an active role in the administration.

So far Carter appears to be relying most heavily on his Georgia campaign supporters and friends to guide him. But Carter's aides have given assurances the President-elect intends to look far and wide for a representative cabinet.

Although Carter seems to be having a difficult time making his decisions, aides insist he is in no hurry and probably will not begin to unveil the makeup of his administration until mid-December or even later.

The ultimate flattery— giving a president advice

by RAY CROMLEY

WASHINGTON — Under the umbrella of his transition team, set up last August, candidate Jimmy Carter operated one of the most effective strategies for winning over strategically placed personalities that I've seen in a half-dozen presidential elections.

This team, preparing for a Carter Administration months before it was clear there would be a Carter Administration, was assigned a small-scale budget of $140,000 out of scarce campaign funds and sought position papers and written advice from several thousand influential citizens nationwide on what a Carter Administration's policies should be.

Now there is nothing more flattering to a man or woman, however prominent, than to be asked his views on a major national issue by the presidential nominee of a major political party. And when that candidate asks for a five to eight-page written proposal on a matter with which you are deeply concerned, the flattery is most compelling.

I KNOW ONE prominent man, active at high levels in a succession of Republican and Democratic administrations — with a philosophy roughly 180 degrees from Carter's — who became a convert after being asked to submit his thoughts, though he had no assurance his advice would be followed. This man knew, in fact, that the overwhelming advice on the subject in which he is expert was being sought from those with views radically different from his own.

The unstated implication, though repeatedly denied, was that having been asked for advice, the adviser would then eventually be considered for a top-level position in a Carter Administration, assuming a Democratic victory.

I understand, in fact, that between a thousand and two thousand of those solicited did in fact submit written opinions on subjects like government reorganization, business, labor and regulatory agency problems, defense, foreign affairs, intelligence activities, inflation and unemployment.

A FEW THOUSAND men and women are but slightly more than a droplet in a national election. But they can be highly influential all the same if carefully chosen from among those who hold leadership positions in labor and finance, religious and minority groups, academic and agricultural circles, and in other circles where Carter needed votes to secure a victory.

With key men and women of influence being drawn into the circle, however obliquely — and however small their actual weight in Carter's plans — the word gets around. And much more effectively than through radio, TV, speeches and other standard campaign techniques. What's created is an aura of reflected prestige and competence gleaned from the reputations of those he's asked for advice and counsel.

There is every indication in the weeks since Nov. 2 that Carter, as president, will use this or similar techniques in his attempts to get Congress to go along with him in carrying out his aims. Senators and Representatives love, above all, to be listened to by anyone, particularly a President.

More comment on Dist. 21 Xmas policy

The article, Nov. 12, regarding Wheeling Township Board of Education's adoption of a new holiday activities policy carried a sub-title "RESTRICTS 'RELIGIOUS' ACTIVITIES." If we disregard this and interpret the report that followed with some degree of accuracy ("The board unanimously approved a policy which requires cultural and historical reasons for any holiday activity that has a religious nature.") no one need fear the sudden disappearance of Christian or Jewish holiday activities from our schools — except perhaps through a dictatorial decision arrived at by an overzealous school principal, teacher or Supt. Kenneth Gill. It is impossible to deny the cultural custom (tradition) and historical background of our religious practices.

So 'Santa Claus' brings the Christ-symbolic gifts at Christmas and the 'Easter Bunny' delivers the eggs that symbolize Christ's rebirth . . . If you peek behind Santa's beard or under the Bunny's tail what you will find is a cultural practice rich in heritage and tradition which is anchored securely in the birth and rebirth of Christ. This tradition, based as it is on the well founded knowledge that the fragile human life needs more than bread (both kinds) alone on this trek from birth to death, is supported too by science.

But these malicious mischief makers want us more vulnerable. For this they need to destroy our spiritual strength. Using and abusing our own Christian ethic, "and a little child shall lead them," they reach to destroy our children and through them, us. It is a tremendous advantage to them to keep the schools (administrators, teachers, students and parents) in perpetual turmoil. Its purpose, total alienation, each of us from the other and all of us from using the beliefs and practices which give us strength and courage to face and defeat adversary and adversity.

Time grows short! Remember that God, sex differentiation and Little Black Sambo have already been banished from our children's classrooms. What filled the vacuum left when these things were plucked from the history of the "great melting pot" and its familial regulation? 'You're free to answer that yourself as long as you recognize that few, if any, of us send our children to school to learn how to smoke pot, get pregnant or use the more lethal drugs.)

Maybe we should push this religious rejection syndrome to the fullest extent of their atheist paranoia and demand they write their proposal devoid of all religiousity and submit it in the same manner. That would promptly dispense with the entire idiotic business, for without a calendar — ours is the Gregorian, named after Pope Gregory XIII — no date could be set to hear a policy that would be reduced to about the level of "dis," "dat," "dem" and "dose." It's about time to call a "halt" anyway, after all Christ roamed the earth teaching, didn't He?

Pro-life movement 'effective'

There is some confusion as to the impact made by the pro-life movement in the recent elections. According to some newspaper editors the right to life movement lacks muscle. The facts do not support this view.

Pro-life in Cook County sent back to the United States House the foremost national pro-life leader, Rep. Henry Hyde, reelected by 60 per cent of the vote over a candidate who made abortion a key issue. Rep. Hyde recently steered the anti-abortion Hyde Amendment to victory over a Presidential veto.

Well over half of Cook County's state house delegation supports the pro-life position, and right to life in the county picked up several new pro-life candidates to send to Springfield where pro-life has a veto-proof House and at least 31 pro-life senators.

Two years ago abortion was not even a major issue in the political campaign. This time it was, and the change came about from tremendous people-power. Not a dollar came from any political action committee in Cook County or Illinois to help the right to life movement make its gains.

Nationwide, the right to life movement gained so much legislative strength that the country's leading abortion activist, New York's Bill Baird, said in a recent interview that new laws banning all abortions could be enacted within two or three years.

The press has called abortion an emotional issue. It is hoped that questions of life and death will always remain emotional. But abortion is an emotional issue rooted in legal scholarship, historical research and political action.

Just 'mildly belated'

Late Yule cards can bring cheer

Dorothy Meyer's column

One of my brothers had a birthday this week and I suddenly discovered two things: there are "Happy Birthday Dear Brother" cards and there are "Happy Birthday A Little Bit Late" cards. But there is no such thing as a "Happy Birthday A Little Bit Late Dear Brother" card.

So I sent him one that said "Happy Easter" and explained in a note that I just wanted to beat the Christmas rush.

In my searching for the right brother greeting, though, I did find one card that inspired me. On the front it says, "Don't feel bad because this birthday greeting is late," and inside is the consoling message, "If it wasn't for this you wouldn't be getting any first class mail at all today."

IT INSPIRED ME so much, in fact, that I'm going to apply the theory to my Christmas cards this year.

The theory goes like this:

Why crowd the chore of writing dozens of Christmas notes and addressing scores of envelopes into a schedule that is already frantic?

If you send your holiday greetings too early, some people who intended tt drop you from their mailing list will be obliged to reinstate you.

IF YOU GET YOUR cards in just under the wire there will be some recipients who'll think you waited until their card arrived before you sent them one.

The middle-f-the-road timing is just as bad. That's when you get so many cards all at once that you don't have time to appreciate them and the mail carriers make the most delivery errors. At the peak of the rush I've gotten cards from people I don't know — and didn't realize it until a week later.

Doesn't it make sense, then to send cards a teensy bit late? Just a day or two late, you understand, and certainly before Jan. 5 — that's Walter Mondale's birthday and you don't want any confusion about whose birth you are commemorating.

Mildly belated Christmas greetings would not only ease the mail carrier's load, it could the the answer to the post-Yule blues. The p-Y-b syndrome is becoming so widespread that there is talk of federal funding to study the phenomenon.

I CAN TELL THE researchers right now that part of that syndrome concerns your mailbox. Suddenly it's as empty as the days immediately following Christmas and you yearn for the sight of even a bill or some junk mail.

What better way to lift the spirits than to find a cheery greeting or two in that so-abruptly empty receptacle?

Now that I have you convinced, let me know how my theory turns out — I don't have the nerve to try it.

Minus Quebec, it may fold

Will there be a Canada in 1980?

by NEA/London Economist News Service

If Canada breaks up, the United States will have a sort of Caribbean to its north as well as the Caribbean it already has to the south.

If Quebec pulls out, it is unlikely that the rest of the Canadian confederation will hold together; its component parts will be more susceptible than ever to Canada's internal east-west tensions and to the gravitational pull from the south.

True, Canada always has been a triumph over geography, but not even Canadians could be expected to maintain a unity stretching 3,000 miles from Newfoundland to Vancouver if there were a gaping hole in the middle of it.

IF, HOWEVER, is still the key word. The separatist Parti Quebecois won a sweeping victory in the recent Quebec election and will now take over the government of the province. The party was founded eight years ago by Rene Levesque to fight for independence, and it remains committed to that goal.

But Levesque always has insisted that he wants to persuade Quebec into independence, not to hustle it; and it is not yet persuaded. Recent opinion polls have indicated that three out of five Quebeckers are against independence, and in the election a similar proportion voted for parties that support continued confederation.

Levesque's party has gained ground in each election since its formation, winning 23 per cent of the votes in 1970, 31 per cent in 1973 and 41 per cent this year. But it owed some part of its latest success to the way it chose to fight this election mainly by attacking the unimpressive record of Robert Bourassa's Liberal government and to play down the question of independence.

After the election, Levesque repeated his campaign promise that he would stay his hand until he had put this question to the Quebeckers in a referendum, and that if they then voted against independence he would accept their decision, reserving only the right to put the question again later if they kept him in office.

HE HAS NO wish to take the plunge and until it is clearly the will of the majority that he should do so. He said the vote would be held about halfway through his five-year term.

Two years is a long time in politics, in Canada as elsewhere. By the time the promised referendum is held, the separatists may hope to benefit from the leverage and the credibility conferred by a period in office — two factors of particular importance for a new party that has never governed before.

They may, however, have proved just as powerless as the Bourassa government to haul Quebec out of its present plight of economic stagnation and heavy unemployment. A province run by declared separatists will not attract much investment (not even from France) and can hardly count on the economic benevolence — worth well over $1 billion a year — that has been bestowed on a Liberal-run Quebec by a Liberal government in the federal capital of Ottawa.

Still less can it expect benevolence from the western provinces which are already enraged by Pierre Trudeau's readiness to placate Quebec.

TO THAT EXTENT, Quebec's fate is still in the hands of the English-speaking Canadians. If they keep their heads, the election could have a salutary effect, bringing it home to those who have reacted against the Pearson and Trudeau governments' bicultural policies that without a wholehearted implementing of those policies there is no hope for Canada's unity.

The present pro-confederation majority in Quebec can be preserved only if French Canadians are at last convinced that Canada is just as much their country as anybody else's.

But if English Canada takes Levesque's victory as a sign that the Pearson-Trudeau line developed since 1963 has run into the sand, and relapses into its old ways with a kind of angry relief, the break-up will surely be only a question of time. Canada will probably not even enter the 1980s.

And the loss will be general, for Canada has shown that it has much to offer not only the English-speaking and French-speaking peoples but also to the wider world.

Carter facing 'serious' Army money problems

Watch on Washington

by Clark Mollenhoff

WASHINGTON, D.C. — A recent government report on the "serious breakdown in the Army's financial management systems" is symptonmatic of the problem the Carter Administration will face in trying to bring order to the federal government.

It is significant that the report on the shocking state of financial affairs in the Army is by the General Accounting Office (GAO), the nonpartisan and authoritative watchdog on federal spending.

In weighing the GAO's criticism it is important to note that the Defense Dept. does not argue with the facts or with the conclusion that there were violations of the law by the Army in over-obligation on spending projects totaling more than $205 million.

THE ILLEGAL over-obligation of funds covered procurement of weapons, tracked combat vehicles, and missiles as well as ammunition in the period from 1971 through 1975.

Tht admitted over-obligation of $205 million involved only three Army appropriations, and the GAO noted 10 more Army appropriations have been found to be in violation of the Anti-Deficiency Act. It has yet to make a determination of the amount of money involved in these 10 cases.

It is important that President-elect Jimmy Carter and his aides understand that the present Army financial mess is not something which has developed suddenly, and that effective reform effort would require a thorough and objective analysis and dedicated follow-through.

Army officials have been aware of the generally poor accounting and reporting practices for more than four years. In fact, the GAO issued a report four years ago entitled "Incomplete Installation of the Management Accounting System for Procurement of Equipment and Missiles."

IN SPITE OF seven years of development and the expenditure of $18.5 million in 1972, the system was not yet fully implemented.

The Army's gross negligence continued under three different Secretaries of the Army — Robert F. Froehlke, Howard H. (Bo) Callaway and Martin Hoffman — all of whom either were unaware of the enormity of the problem or simply failed to give it the kind of attention needed for effective corrective action.

Four different Secretaries of Defense — from Melvin Laird through Donald H. Rumsfeld — had overall responsibility for the Army's illegal over-obligations, even if they were unaware of the law violations.

Despite the warnings in the 1972 GAO report, the Army appeared to have ignored the problem until September, 1975, when the GAO called attention to a potential over-obligation at the U.S. Army Electronic Command, Fort Monmouth, New Jersey, of $40.2 million and that such an over-obligation would be a law violation.

A MONTH LATER, the Army was prodded into acknowledging extensive financial management problems and possible law violations in over-obligating at least $150 million.

Since then, the Army has been engaged in a very costly, but essential, effort to determine the extent of the problem created by prior negligence which it had not faced up to until after it had been forced to stop payment on about 1,200 contracts involving about 900 contractors.

Now the Army is contrite and full of promises on taking corrective action. The Army has established several committees to identify actions needed to improve financial management. Those committees, at the time the GAO report was filed, identified a need for more than 400 corrective actions.

If there is to be any progress on the financial chaos and other problems, President-elect Carter himself must become personally involved in analysis of the problems and in making certain that a follow-through by his subordinates has the highest priority.

FIREBALL RISES from a hanger at Pearson Airport in Vancouver, Wash., late Thursday. The fire occurred when aviation gasoline exploded in a hanger. Five aircraft and a helicopter were destroyed.

Transit workers told to end strike

A judge Friday issued a preliminary injunction ordering 2,600 Pittsburgh transit workers to end a strike, now in its third day, and return to work while negotiations resume in their wage contract dispute. Judge Silvestri did not order an immediate return to work. He directed officials of Division 85, Amalgamated Transit Union, to call a membership meeting within a 36-hour period, beginning at 8 a.m. Chicago time Saturday, and read his order to the striking workers. The judge made no mention of penalties in the event his order is not complied with. But he indicated union leaders would be held in contempt if that happened. Union leaders said previously they would go to jail rather than order their men back to work.

'Princess' transformers recalled

American Telephone and Telegraph Co. Friday announced the recall of 170,000 transformers used to light the dials of "Princess" and "Trimline" telephones because they may overheat and catch fire. The transformers are small plastic cases plugged into electrical outlets in conjunction with the telephones, ATT said. Those involved are mostly in homes where more than one of the telephones with the lighted dials is in use. The company said it notified the Consumer Product Safety Commission of the problem this week. It said that only seven defective units were found.

New chemical curbs tooth decay

Researchers in Boston have reported the successful testing of a chemical that breaks down decayed tooth material and flushes it away. The chemical GK-101, developed over a five year period at the Tufts University School of Dental Medicine, allows dentists to prepare decayed teeth for filling without having to use the drill. "The advantage of the spray is that it reduces the element of pain and also conserves the healthy portion of the tooth," Dr. Melvin Goldman said. Goldman and Dr. Joseph H. Kronman reported in the current issue of the Journal of the American Dental Association 50 patients were treated by the process for 61 cavities. They said the process removed the decay completely from 58 cavities and partially from the three others.

Industrial pollution hinted in Gulf

Large numbers of tiny black magnetic spheres are raining into the eastern Gulf of Mexico and they probably come from industrial pollution, three University of South Florida scientists reported Friday. They estimated in a report in the journal, Science, that as much as 650,000 tons of these microscopic particles might be falling into the eastern Gulf annually. The researchers said it was tempting to identify such shiny, black magnetic spheres as micrometeorites. But they said detailed laboratory analysis tended to rule out space or volcanically derived sources. The analyses instead, the report said, indicated the source of most of these spherules probably was industrial fly ash. The particles were basically magnetite with asociated impurities such as magnesium, calcium and aluminum.

Britain's role in Rhodesia OKd

Black nationalist leaders Friday accepted Britain's offer to supervise the interim government that will guide Rhodesia to black majority rule. Bishop Abel Muzorewa, president of the African National Council, told the other delegations at the Rhodesia conference in Geneva that Britain must supervise law and order during the transitional government leading up to the March 1, 1978, date for independence set by Britain. Two of the other three black leaders at the conference, militants Robert Mugabe and Joshua Nkomo of the "Patriotic Front," joined Muzorewa in requesting British presence to "guarantee the transfer of power." The fourth nationalist bloc, the delegation of Ndabaningi Sithole, said it was not "really" in favor of British presence but indicated it would not strongly oppose it.

Denies U.S. bias in Nobel selections

Nobel Foundation director Stig Ramel Friday denied that the all-American 1976 Nobel prizes were a deliberate tribute to the United States in its Bicentennial year. "I am surprised to hear speculations that the Nobel selections were meant to hail the United States," Ramel said. "These are headless speculations since it is individual scientists, not nations, who are awarded." Seven Americans won this year's Nobel prizes for physics, medicine, chemistry, economics and literature. The peace prize, administered by the Norwegain Nobel Committee in Oslo, was reserved.

Britons drinking more: report

Britons are drinking more, staying home a lot in the winter and having fewer babies. It's all in a new 270-page government report called "Social Trends." Consider:

- Britons are drinking more beer, wine and spirits than they did three years ago. Consumption of spirits increased between 1971 and 1975 from half a gallon to four-fifths a gallon; beer by two gallons a year.
- They are watching more television during winter months — 19.9 hours a week — but less during the summer — 14.7 hours a week.
- The birth rate in Britain has dropped from 862,000 births in 1971 to 688,000 in 1975.

State unemployment drops

Jobless rate, wholesale prices up

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The economy remained sluggish in November as the unemployment rate hit a 1976 high and wholesale prices continued to rise, the federal governmenet reported Friday.

The nation's unemployment rate rose to 8.1 per cent, topping the 8 per cent mark for the first time this year.

Meanwhile, Illinois' jobless rate dropped from 7.4 per cent in October to 7.3 per cent. The Chicago metropolitan area unemployment rate increased from 7.4 per cent to 7.5 per cent. The U.S. Wholesale Price Index increased .6 per cent during November.

BUT THE BUSINESS community got some good news from President-elect Jimmy Carter, who said he has no intention of seeking wage or price controls during his four-year term. A White House report said the steel companies had raised sheet steel prices by an average 6 per cent price now because they feared Carter would seek price controls.

The nation's jobless rate represented an increase of .2 per cent during October and was just .8 per cent below the worst reading of the 1974-75 recession.

The Illinois Labor Dept. said the only major labor area in the state to show a significant increase in unemployment was East St. Louis where the rate jumped from 8 per cent in October to 9.4 per cent in November. The increase was blamed on temporary layoffs at a local steel manufacturing firm.

The Chicago region increase was caused by continued high unemployment in the building trades and seconday layoffs triggered by the November strike against five big bakeries, department analysts said.

The Wholesale Price Index records prices paid throughout the economy, except those paid by consumers at retail stores.

THE .6 PER CENT rise for November matched the increase recorded in October. The latest index means that goods that cost $1,000 in 1967 cost wholesale buyers $1,856 last month.

For the three-month period compounded at an annual rate from August, the department said industrial commodities have risen 11.6 per cent and nonfood consumer goods 10.5 per cent.

Wholesale prices are those charged by primary producers and suppliers throughout the economy short of consumer purchases from retail stores. Prices charged to wholesale buyers are incorporated into the cost of production in making consumer goods.

The index contains three major categories: raw farm products such as eggs and beef, processed foods such as cereals and bakery goods, and industrial commodities such as fuel, metals and lumber.

Fuel prices accounted for half of the .8 per cent increase in the industrial sector. Prices for iron, steel and other metals held steady or fell while those for building materials rose.

THESE REPORTS seemed to support the pessimistic view of some of Ford's top economic advisers, who now say the economic growth rate during the last three months of 1976 probably will be less than the weak 3.8 per cent gain registered in the July-September quarter.

Earlier predictions had the growth rate increasing as much as 6 per cent.

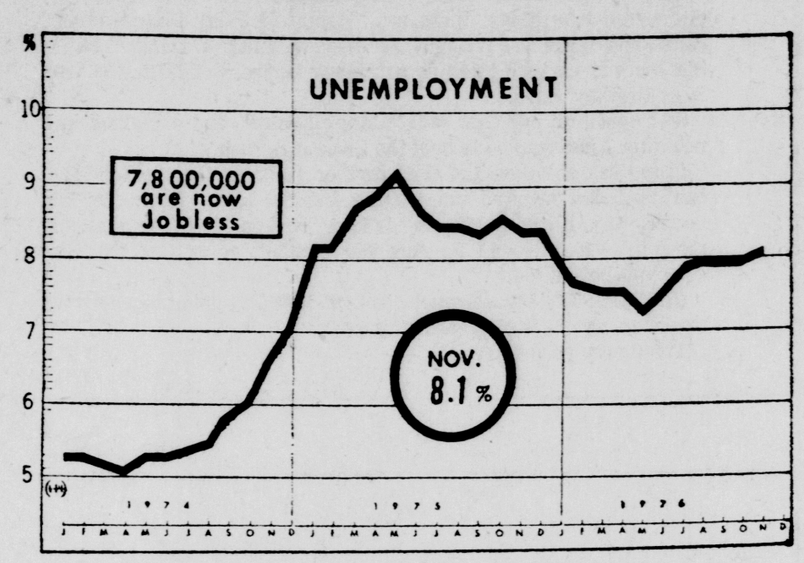
But Alan Greenspan, chairman of Ford's Council of Economic Advisers, said the main problem with the economy is that consumers and businessmen have shown " a higher degree of caution . . . than I expected four or five months ago."

After the release of Friday's reports, White House Press Sec. Ron Nessen said, "obviously we're unhappy with the rise in unemployment." But he said the administration also found some "positive elements" in the supporting data.

HE SAID THEY included a "significant" rise in total employment to a "record high number of people working" after two straight months of decline; the highest number of aggregate man hours worked this year; an increase in overtime; and a 1.3 per cent increase in average weekly earnings.

Carter made his statement on wage-price controls during an interview on NBC's "Today" show. "I have no intention at all during the next four years of asking for wage and price authority, even on a standby basis," he said.

"So there need be no concern in the business community or the labor community that I intend to go toward wage and price controls unless there's a national emergency, which I certainly don't anticipate." The statement was by far Carter's strongest disavowal of controls. In the past, he has said he might favor standby authority, although he saw no prospect of mandatory controls.



AS THE U. S. unemployment rate rose to 8.1 per cent in November, the jobless rate dipped in Illinois and increased for the Chicago area.

Dow active; finishes on upbeat

NEW YORK (UPI) — Prices registered a broad gain Friday in active trading on the New York Stock Exchange in response to President-elect Carter's pledge not to impose price controls when he takes office.

Carter triggered some late profit taking when he said he admired the principles of the controversial Humphrey-Hawkins Bill that would require industry to provide certain information for long-range government economic planning.

As a result, the Dow Jones industrial average, up nearly six points at one time, finished with a gain of 3.91 to 950.55. The blue-chip average lost 2.74 points Thursday and finished the week with a loss of 6.07 points.

The NYSE common stock index gained 0.33 to 55.20 and the average price of a common share increased 20 cents. Standard & Poor's 500-stock index, which includes some over-the-counter shares, added 0.64 to 102.76.

Advances topped declines, 981 to 476, among the 1,919 issues crossing the tape. The 462 unchanged issues reflected some uncertainty.

Business briefs

Auto industry sales big in November

Pushed by strong demand for big cars and new rebate-inspired interest in small models, the U.S. auto industry reported Friday it sold more cars in November than in any month since June. Sales by the four U.S automakers totaled 720,772 cars and topped year-ago levels by nearly 6 per cent. It was the best November since 1973. The still-lingering effects of the 28-day Ford Motor Co. strike cost that auto company about 40,000 sales and dropped it 11 per cent below a year ago. General motors was up 16 per cent in November over a year ago and Chrysler jumped 9 per cent. Despite a $253 price cut on its subcompact Gremlin and a $253 cash rebate on its Pacer, American Motors still lagged 24 per cent below last November. Imports also scored strong gains, particularly the Japanese models. Foreign car sales were estimated at about 118,000 cars in November, up 31 per cent from last year. Toyota, Datsun and Honda, the top-selling Japanese imports, each set November sales records.

UPS, union announce agreement

Negotiators for the Teamsters Union and United Parcel Service Friday announced a tentative contract agreement that could end a lengthy strike which has tied up pre-Christmas shipping on the East Coast. A Teamsters spokesman indicated some 18,000 striking UPS employes will be asked to vote later this week on the agreement. But he refused to predict how soon the union members could be back at work. UPS employes in 15 East Coast states have been on strike since Sept. 16. The walkout halted UPS shipments in those states, forcing the U.S. Postal Service and other private carriers to pick up the burden of preholiday shipping. Terms of the tentative agreement were concluded in an all-night bargaining session. No details were announced. The agreement will be presented Monday to the union's full negotiating committee, which will outline the terms of the pact Tuesday to the representatives of the 74 local unions involved in the strike.

Group on strike at O'Hare

A strike by union employes of Butler Aviation entered its second day Friday at O'Hare International Airport. The walkout over the salary dispute occurred Thursday by members of Local 1487 of the International Assn. of Machinists and Aerospace Workers. A company spokesman said 75 full-time workers and 60 part-time employes joined in the walkout, which affected only Butler's O'Hare operation. A union spokesman said the walkout included only 95 workers. Union spokesman Earl Rompf said negotiators failed to reach a new contract before the old pact expired at 12:01 a.m. Wednesday, and members voted Wednesday night to go on strike.

Dec. 17 set for Caterpillar pact

The United Auto Workers union has set noon Dec. 17 as a target for completion of negotiations on a new contract with Caterpillar, Inc., union officials said Friday. The UAW's Pat Greathouse, vice president for the farm implement industry, advised Caterpillar negotiators of the union timetable Thursday. He said if no agreement is reached by the noon Dec. 17 deadline, the union will terminate the extension of the present contract Jan. 2, permitting strike action Jan. 3. Greathouse said the union expected to schedule membership meetings Dec. 18 and 19 either to approve a new contract or discuss differences between the two sides.

UAW may rejoin AFL-CIO

United Auto Workers President Leonard Woodcock and AFL-CIO chief George Meany met for nearly two hours Friday, discussing the UAW's likely steps toward rejoining the giant labor federation. The meeting apparently was designed to smooth over UAW Secretary-Treasurer Emil Mazey's opposition to rejoining the AFL-CIO. But Mazey, who accompanied Woodcock, was now swayed. "No, I'm not," Mazey told reporters after the meeting. "We left the AFL-CIO for specific reasons and unless and until these conditions are corrected, I would not be in favor of it." Woodcock, who was known to favor reaffiliation, was more reluctant to comment. "We came to no conclusion," he said. "If we can assume that we are going to reaffiliate, we're one day closer."

Reservation system computerized

The first "Apollo" computerized ticketing and reservations system in the Chicago metropolitan area was recently installed in the Best Travel & Tours office at 4733 N. Cumberland Ave., Chicago. The United Airlines Apollo Travel Agent Service will be installed at the Best firm's additional offices in Schaumburg, Vernon Hills, Chicago and Riverside Mike Sarvady, Best owner, said. The new system can handle ground transportation, hotel and meal accommodations and airline reservations.

Insurance hike hearing Dec. 20

The Illinois Insurance Dept. has scheduled public hearings in Springfield on the Blue Cross and Blue Shield requests for 20.4 per cent to 31.9 per cent rate increases. Michael Duncan, department director said the hearings will begin 10 a.m. Dec. 20 in the State Capital. Dr. Kenneth Tannenbaum of the Health Systems Group of Ann Arbor, Mich., has been appointed hearing officer.

Hawks win by one; Bison star sidelined

by ART MUGALIAN

Because Brian Allsmiller was sitting on the Buffalo Grove bench in his street clothes, people will say that was the reason the Hoffman Estates Hawks upset the previously unbeaten Bison, 54-53, Friday night.

Allsmiller missed his first varsity basketball game since his freshman year, sitting it out instead of risking further damage to his pain-wracked shins, and Buffalo Grove missed their 6-foot-8 All-State candidate desperately.

But Hoffman coach Jerry Segebrecht and his elated staff of assistants refused to let anything dampen their enthusiasm.

"THAT HAS to be our greatest victory in the school's young history," said Segebrecht, after the Hawks moved their record to 3-2. "It was a magnificent team victory."

The Hawks got incredible efforts from 6-6 Ron Warring and 6-5 Joe Tully. Warring led his team in scoring with 18 points and pulled down 16 rebounds while Tully had 16 points and 15 rebounds.

But the winning points were tossed in by junior forward Doug Oslance, whose two free throws with 54 seconds left gave the Hawks a 52-51 lead. Oslance and Buffalo Grove's Mike Ledna traded baskets before Ledna's last-second down-the-lane drive failed.

It was a long uphill climb for the Hawks who trailed by as many as 10 points in the second half, thanks mainly to the play of Buffalo Grove guard Scott Groot and his sophomore teammate Chris Molenaur, who was filling in for Allsmiller.

GROOT scored 18 points and spearheaded the Bison's full-court press that created numerous Hawk turnovers in the first half. Molenaur, a 6-9 center, had 7 points, all in the thrid quarter before he got into foul trouble.

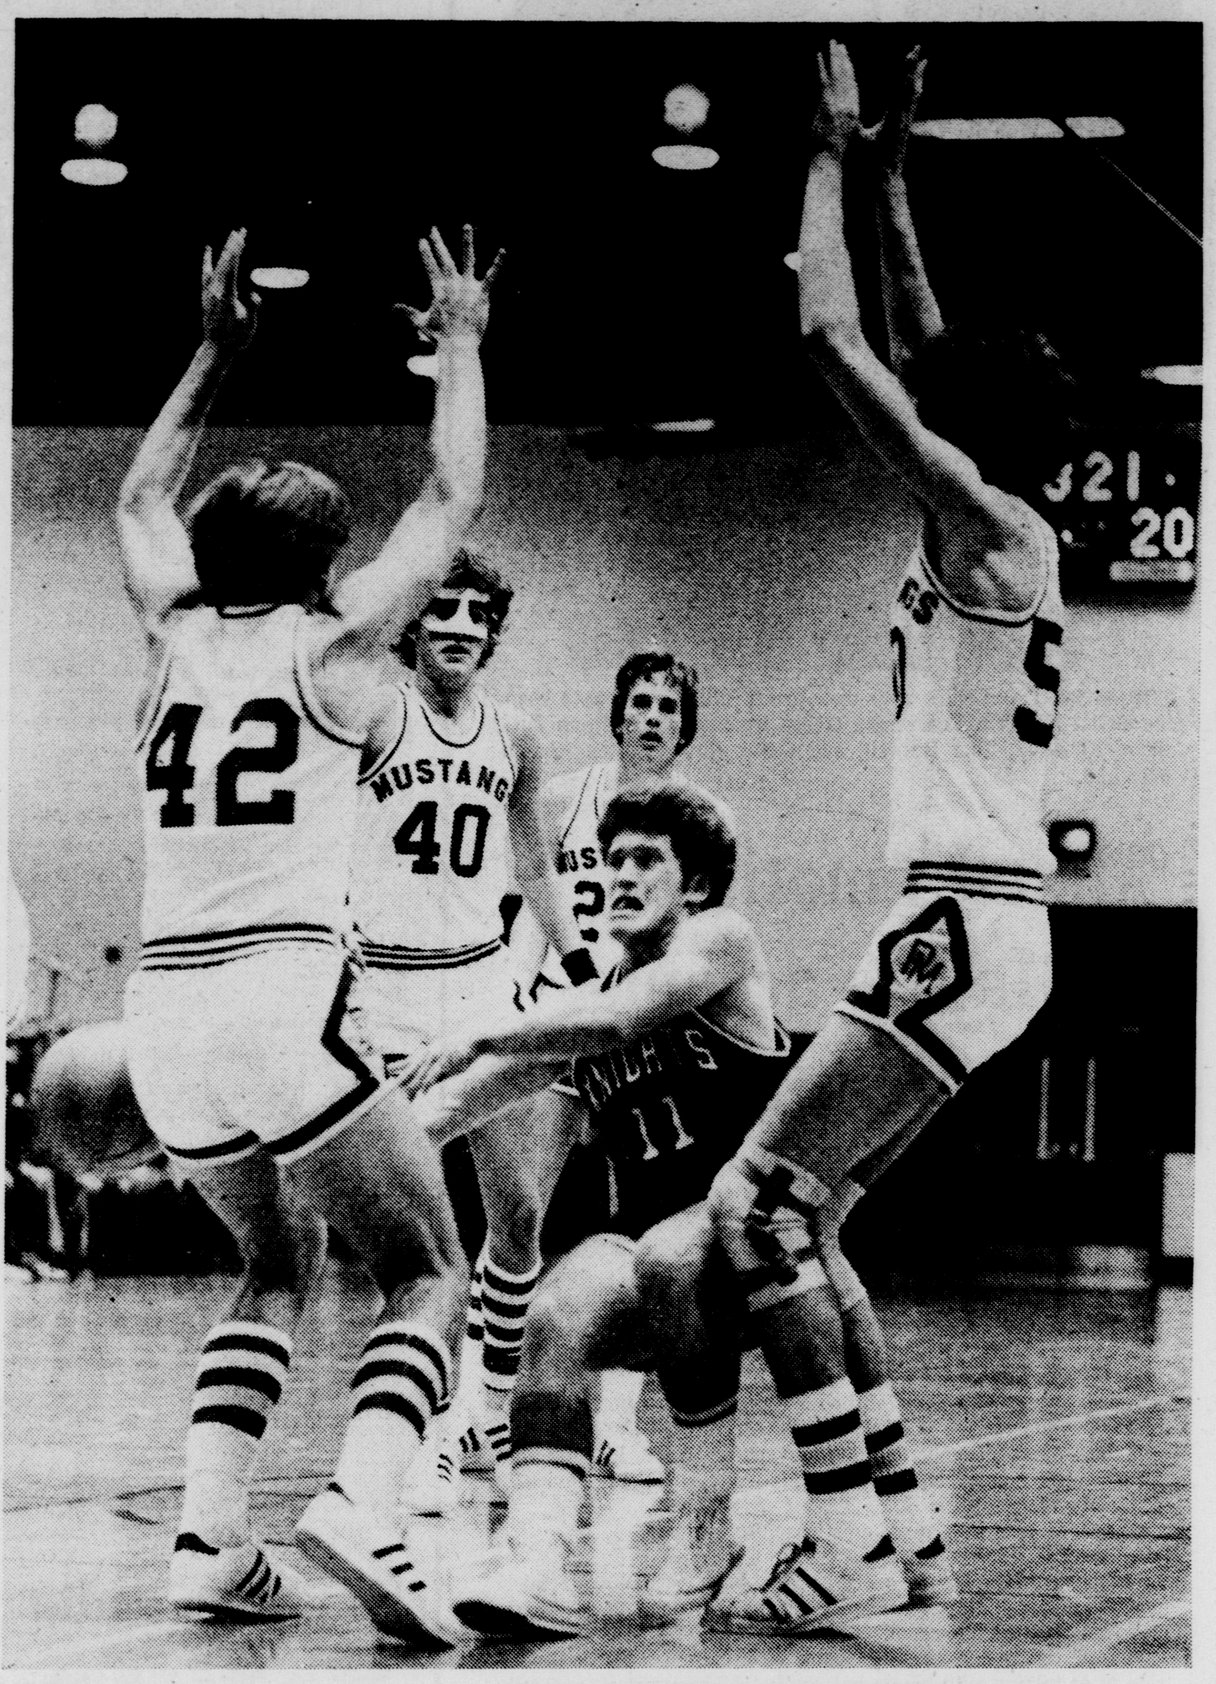
"We finally switched to a 1-3-1 defense because they were killing us inside with that big kid," said Segebrecht. "We started pressuring the ball and kept them from lobbing inside."

Baskets by Warring and Tully at the start of the fourth quarter cut the Bisonlead to four before Tully hit a 15-footer from the right corner to make it 47-45.

Groot made both ends of the one-and-one with 1:35 left to boost Buffalo Grove's lead to 51-48, but John Staback of Hoffman hit a short jumper in the lane at 1:20 before Oslance pumped in his game-winning free throws.

"WE SHOULD have been able to win it without Brian," said Bison coach Paul Grady, whose team is 4-1 after the crossover loss. "We just missed too many shots and too many free throws."

Segebrecht and his staff — Jeff Spies, Dave Freeman, Dennis Ferguson and Bob Edmunds — have a while to savor the victory. At least until the Mid-Suburban title game in February when they just may have to face Buffalo Grove again.



CUSTER PROBABLY found the same odds at Little Big Horn as Prospect's Barry Carlstedt (11) discovered at Rolling Meadows Friday night. The Mustangs beat Prospect, 56-50, in the Mid-Suburban League opener with a surrounding defense displayed by Jeff Schrock (42), Dave Crouch (40), Kent Walker (24) and Kevin Kiley.

First for Grams

Elk Grove tops Conant, 42-29

by BOB GALLAS

It may not have been a masterpiece, but Elk Grove coach Ken Grams wasn't complaining.

Grams got his first varsity coaching win after four tries Friday night, a 42-27 decision over visiting Conant. But he also got his first lesson in how coaches get gray hair.

His Grenadiers, who defensively throttled an inexperienced Cougar five, couldn't do much of anything else right but got enough help from their opposition to win.

DESPITE HITTING only five field goals in the first half, the defending Mid-Suburban League champion Cougars still were within one point at halftime, at 17-16. Two Elk Grove starters went to the bench in foul trouble midway through the first half and charity shots kept coach Dick Redlinger's crew within range.

Conant hit the first basket of the half to briefly take an 18-17 lead. Then the roof fell in.

Nine straight points gave the Grens a 26-18 lead midway through the third period, and Conant never got closer than five points after that.

Both coach's post game comments hinted that the two clubs have plenty of work ahead.

"I'M PLEASED WITH the defense. They denied Conant the good shot and got them standing around," said Grams. "But we were picking up way too many foolish fouls and need to get our timing on offense. This was a game that could have easily gotten away from us."

Redlinger's crew hit only 10 field goals in 39 attempts and all but two were either layups or rebound shots. From the free throw line, the Cougars cashed only nine of 21 attempts. Conant's best shooter, Rob Totten, still feeling the effects of a broken collarbone, could hit on only eight of 17 from the charity stripe.

"We've got a lot of work to do," said Redlinger. "We were confused on offense, we're very inexperienced, and we don't have a center, but we were still in the game most of the way."

Conant closed to within five at 32-27 with six minutes left in the game and threatened to cut the Grens' lead to three, but couldn't get the hoop. In fact, the Conant offense didn't get another point until Scott Schafer put in a rebound with 10 seconds left in the game.

Mark Smith lead the winners with 15 points. Totten, who fouled out with four minutes to play, led Conant with 16 points.

Elk Grove travels to Wheeling tonight for a non-conference game and Conant travels to Lake Park.

Rolling Meadows shades Prospect

by JIM COOK

Rolling Meadows has its heart set on being an exciting team this season and the Mustangs certainly didn't disappoint their following with a hair-raising 56-50 opening league triumph over rival Prospect Friday night.

"If they have an opportunity to blow somebody out of the gym, they'll turn it down," a relieved but concerned Meadows head coach Bill Weinberg said.

"They want the games to go down to the wire so they can prove they're clutch players, I guess," Weinberg joked.

THE JOKE WAS almost on 3-1 Rolling Meadows, though, as relentless Prospect kept the outcome in doubt until Kevin Kiley's decisive layup at the buzzer.

Meadows played to their script of staying close to the opposition with a slim 49-48 lead with just 2:50 remaining in the game.

But a violation on a Prospect free throw cancelled a would-be tie and the Mustangs were never headed again. A pair of key free throws by Kent Walker and the game's final bucket — a leaping tip-in by 6-foot Mustang Bob Rose — opened a 53-48 gap with two minutes left.

Paul Izban, who keyed Prospect's second-half surge with 12 of his 19 points, boosted the Knights back into contention, 53-50, with a pair of free throws and 1:30 still remaining.

DESPITE PRESSING, trapping, scrapping pressure at both ends, Sam DeMarie's free throw and Kiley's buzzer-sealing bucket was the only scoring.

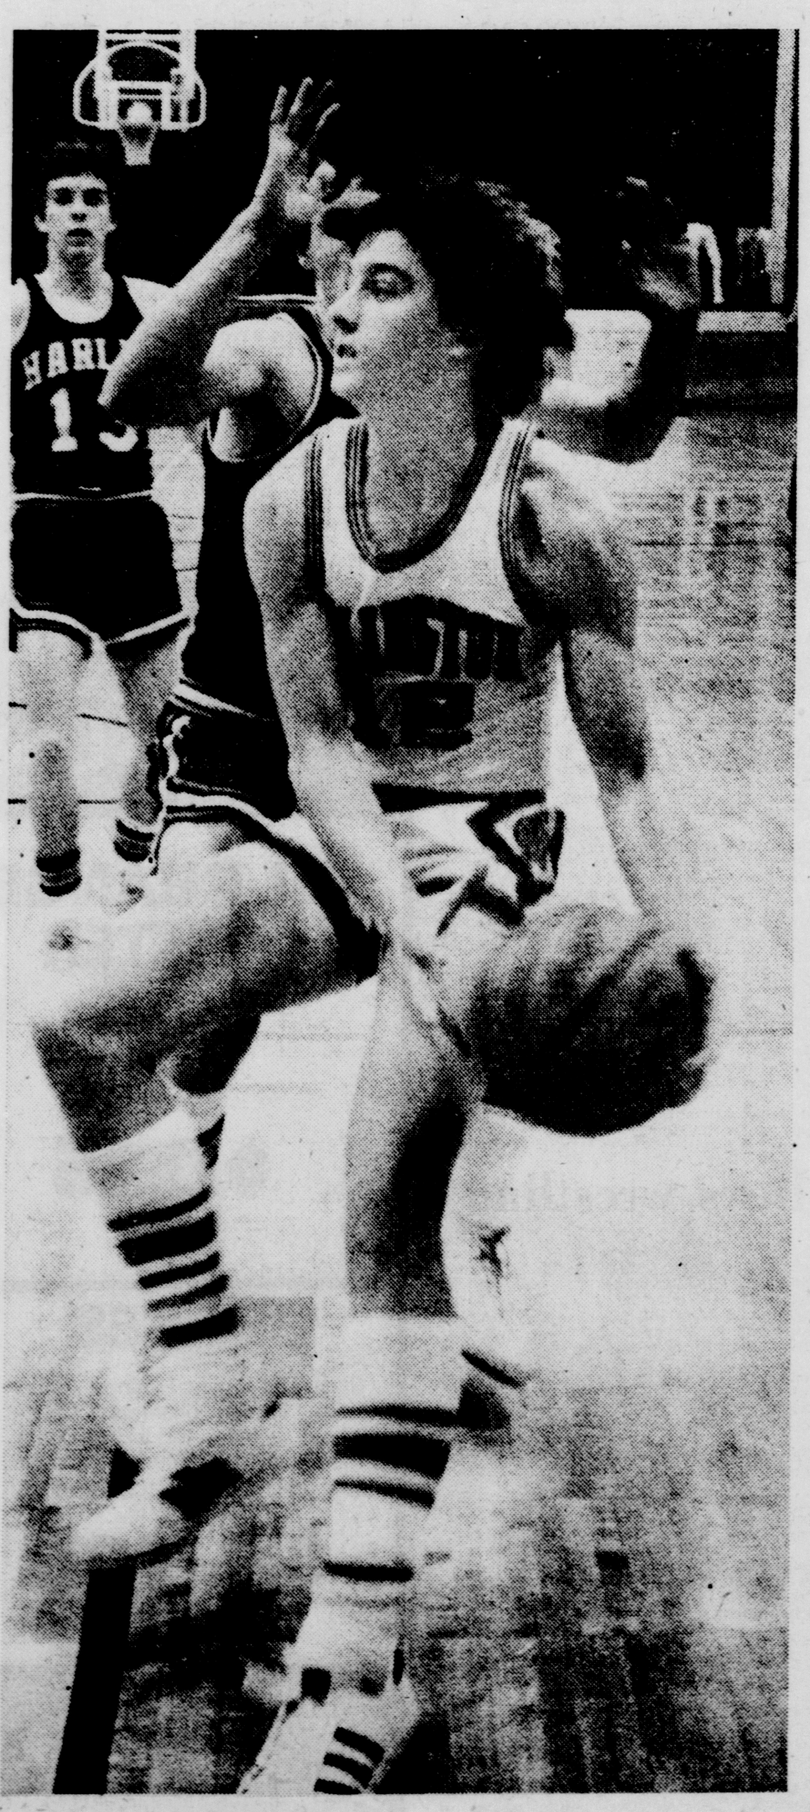
But although the ball wasn't going through the hoop, the boisterous crowd saw three steals, four personal fouls, a player ejection and a very effective Rolling Meadows four-corner stall offense.

The opening half was a shooting duel between Kiley, who flashed smooth, but determined moves to the basket, and 6-foot-2 soph Knight Jim Apuzzo.

"He (Apuzzo) was killing us from everywhere on the floor," Weinberg said of the hot-shooting guard who notched a dozen points in the first 16 minutes.

"WE ALTERED our defense to keep the ball away from him," Weinberg explained of his strategy at the intermission. The Mustangs kept Apuzzo off the scoreboard in the second half.

While Apuzzo passed the hot hand to Izban, Kiley was consistently moving effectively without the ball on offense and breaking loose for the short, percentage shot. Teammates Kent Walker added 13 and Rose 10.



HEADING FOR the hoop is Arlington's Ken Johnstin during action Friday night at Arlington. The Cardinals defeated Loves Park Harlem, 75-67.

Moeller brings solid credentials to Illinois post

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (UPI) — Gary Moeller, an assistant coach at Michigan who prides himself on never being a part of a losing football team, was appointed head football coach Friday at the University of Illinois.

A strong recruiter, Moeller, 35, was named by Athletic Director Cecil Coleman at a news conference.

Moeller has been defensive coordinator to Bo Schembechler at Michigan during the past eight years when the Wolverine teams compiled a 76-10-3 record. He was given a five-year contract.

MOELLER WILL stay with Michigan until after the Wolverines play Southern California in the Rose Bowl. Michigan's defensive team, under his coaching this year, yielded only 7.4 points per game to tie Rutgers for the national defensive title.

A former Lima, Ohio, resident, Moeller was a center and linebacker at Ohio State under Woody Hayes and captained the 1962 team. After successful high school coaching seasons in Michigan and Ohio, he joined Schembechler at Miami of Ohio in 1967 and moved with him to Michigan in 1969. Their joint record at Michigan is 76-10-3 over eight years.

Moeller is married to the former Ann Morrison of Lima. They have four children.

Bob Blackman's contract was not renewed after the Illini finished with a 5-6 record. Blackman had been Illini coach for six years and had led the team to a winning record in only one of those years.

COLEMAN SAID Moeller's appointment was "effective immediately" although it must be confirmed by the university's board of trustees at a Dec. 15 meeting.

Moeller, a husky six-footer, gave ample indication that the Illinois defense will draw much of his interest. "To win the Big Ten you have to build a tough defense," he said.

Asked whether his coaching philosophy was closer to Hayes' or to Schembechler's, Moeller thought a minute and said, "I'm probably more like Gary Moeller. My philosophy is to have a winning program."

THE NEW COACH said he planned to meet with his players next week.

Gary Moeller

He said he would take 10 days or so to go with Michigan to the Rose Bowl.

He said he had been offered other jobs but credited Schembechler with pointing him toward Illinois. He said he had always been impressed with the facilities at Illinois and that as a player at Ohio State he had made his first trip to Champaign.

"I hope a lot of people will get behind the program," he said.

As to the potential recruits he has been talking to about Michigan, Moeller said, "They are anybody's property."

LATER, AT A news conference in Chicago, Coleman said between 150 and 175 had applied for the job, the search committee had talked to 25 directly or indirectly and nine had come to Champaign for interviews.

"Moeller was not their initial first choice," Coleman said, "but he didn't take long to surface."

Officials said Schembechler and Hayes both gave their endorsements on Moeller to the committee.

He will be 36 in January and the youngest coach in the Big Ten.

'Mixed emotions' as Majors accepts Tennessee position

PITTSBURGH — A somber-faced Johnny Majors announced Friday that he had decided with "mixed emotions" to leave his job as head coach of top-ranked Pittsburgh to return to his alma mater, the University of Tennessee, as assistant athletic director and head football coach.

Majors, an All-American on the Vols' 2nd-ranked 1956 team, said he would sign a six-year contract with Tennessee Jan. 2, the day after the Panthers' Sugar Bowl clash with Georgia, and begin work the same day.

Tennessee Athletic Director Bob Woodruff said Majors, who replaces resigning coach Bill Battle, would be paid $50,000 per year.

Majors came directly to his news conference in Pitt Stadium from a hastily called meeting with his players. He was obviously shaken by the session.

"I take this job with mixed emotions," Majors said.

"Both of them have more plusses than minuses."

"Finances were not of concern; I've been treated very fairly here," he said. "They gave me a great opportunity to stay here. They left no stone unturned."

Majors said that Wednesday night, when he made his final decision after talking with his parents, wife, children and other family members, he finally decided that he wanted to go home again.

Flames skate by Bruins in NHL

Bill Flett, Ken Houston and Eric Vail scored goals Friday night to lift the Atlanta Flames to a 3-1 victory over the Boston Bruins in the National Hockey League.

Hartland Monahan ripped a shot out of a goalmouth scramble to beat Bernie Parent with 30 seconds left in the game and give the Washington Capitals a 4-4 tie with the Philadelphia Flyers.

Dennis Maruk scored two goals to help the Cleveland Barons break a five-game losing streak with a 2-2 tie against the St. Louis Blues.

Illinois falls by one in Missouri

COLUMBIA, Mo. — Senior guard Scott Sims scored a career-high 24 points and 15th-ranked Missouri took advantage of a surplus of free-throws Friday night to beat Illinois 76-75 in the opening round of the Show-Me Classic.

Missouri hit 26 of 33 free throws en route to the victory over Illinois which went to the charity line only 10 times and had three players foul out, including Ken Ferdinand, who scored 16 points before leaving the game with 13:23 to play and Rich Adams, who had 13 points before leaving with 7:41 left.

After gaining a 39-37 halftime lead, Missouri built its margin to 11 points, 72-61, with 5:40 to play before Illinois rode the hot shooting of reserve Rob Judson, who finished with 16 second-half points, to pull within one, 76-75, with a minute to play.

But Illinois, which had the ball for the final 56 seconds of the game, was unable to get off a shot and Missouri ran its record to 2-1.

76ers trade Carter to Milwaukee

PHILADELPHIA — The Philadelphia 76ers have traded Fred Carter, their one-time leading scorer, to the Milwaukee Bucks in exchange for No. 2 draft choices in the 1977 and 1978 college drafts.

Carter, who led the Sixers in scoring three of the last four seasons, saw limited play this year after Philadelphia obtained Julius Erving from the New York Nets.

The Philadelphia native was listed as the No. 4 guard and played in 16 games, averaging 6.9 points.

'One-on-one shootout' in soccer

Team owners of the North American Soccer League approved a new procedure Friday for breaking ties at their Chicago meeting.

Instead of using the current penalty kick with a stationary ball from 12 years for the tie-breaker, five players on each team will employ a "one-on-one shootout" with the shooters moving in on the goal one at a time from the 35-yard line.

It will be similar to a penalty shot in hockey except that each player will have only five seconds to shoot or forfeit the opportunity.

Penn State threats investigated

UNIVERSITY PARK, Pa. — The FBI is investigating threats made by letter and telephone in the past several weeks to Penn State football coach Joe Paterno, three of his assistants and the mother of quarterback Chuck Fusina.

"We have entered it (the investigation) very seriously and are pursuing it rigorously," FBI agent Tom Dolan said Friday.

Other news in the sports world...

Celtics hand Bulls No. 13

From Herald Wire Services

Jo Jo White scored eight of his season high 38 points in overtime Friday night to give the Boston Celtics a hard-fought 115-109 victory over stubborn Chicago, a club record 13th straight loss for the Bulls.

With the score tied 104-104, Charlie Scott converted a three-point play with 3:17 left in the overtime. White followed with a foul line jumper and Sidney Wicks, who had 15 points on the night, hit a lay-up as the Celtics ran off seven unanswered points.

With Chicago ahead 92-91 with 2:34 remaining in regulation play, Boston ran off the six straight points, including five by White, who had 12 in the quarter. But Chicago came right back and Mickey Johnson, who had five points in the overtime, scored a layup with 15 seconds remaining to draw Chicago to within a point.

AFTER A WHITE free throw gave Boston a two-point lead with six seconds remaining Jack Marin hit a 12-foot jump shot to tie it at 100-100 with three seconds left to put the game into overtime.

Scott wound up with 21 points for the Celtics and Tommie Boswell added 14. Johnson had 28 points, Artis Gilmore had 23 and Norm Van Lier 20 for the Bulls.

CHRIS FORD fired in five straight points to break a 108-108 tie late in the final period Friday night as the Detroit Pistons rallied from a 15-point deficit to beat the Kansas City Kings, 124-115, and snap a four-game losing streak.

Rookie Adrian Dantley and Bob McAdoo each scored 30 points to lead the Buffalo Braves to a 135-112 thrashing of the New York Knicks for the visitors' fifth straight loss.

Billy Knight slipped behind the Cleveland defense for a layup with eight seconds left and Don Buse stole an inbounds pass and added a pair of free throws to lead Indiana to a 112-109 win over the Cavaliers.

David Thompson and Dan Issel scored 30 points apiece to lift Denver to a 126-124 win over the New York Nets and snap the Nuggets' six-game losing streak on the road.

Fred Brown scored 14 of his game-high 29 points in the final period to help the Seattle Supersonics end a 14-game road losing streak with a 121-112 victory over the Philadelphia 76ers.

Pete Maravich, the NBA's leading scorer, hit 28 points in three quarters of play Friday night and five other New Orleans players scored in double figures to lead the Jazz to a 121-105 victory over Atlanta.

Saxons rule on Chmiel's basket; Cards also win

A Herald Staff Report

It was no secret who was going to get the ball.

With less than 10 seconds left in the game Gary Deigan drove up the baseline and passed to John Chmiel under the net. The big center arched a short shot over a few outstretched arms and . . . swish . . . Schaumburg came away from Forest View's gym with an exciting 61-59 win in opening Mid-Suburban South Division basketball action Friday.

"I GUESS everyone in the gym knew what we were going to do," sighed Saxon coach Joe Brealt, who had used up his last time out with 21 seconds remaining to chart the game's final play. "If it works, you look brilliant. If it doesn't you're a bum. This one didn't come off exactly as planned but we'll take it anyway."

The final field goal capped a 28-point outburst for the talented junior veteran and Falcon coach Ted Wissen could only shrug his shoulders afterwards. "We knew they were going to go to him. They did it all night. Unfortunately, I wasn't exaggerating earlier in the week when I said Chmiel was probably the best pure shooter in the league."

THERE WAS NO doubt about it Friday. Hitting from all over the court, he was the only Saxon who didn't appear to cave in under the pressure of Forest View's full court hawking man-to-man defense in the late going. The Falcon press allowed the hosts to roar back into contention after slipping behind by ten through three periods of play.

Jeff Martinski's steal and Chris Hanson's fast break layup, two free throws by Martinski, Rick Gardner's steal and layup and a ten-foot shot off the backboard by Martinski hiked the Falcons from a 54-46 deficit into a 55-54 lead with 3:59 to go.

With three of five Saxon starters fouled out, Chmiel countered with a 15 footer from the side and two free throws in the waning moments, setting the stage for the dramatic finish.

ARLINGTON TAKES 5TH

The Arlington Cardinals used a strong second half to coast past visiting Loves Park Harlem, 75-67.

Coach George Zigman's Cards shook off a lackluster first-half showing with plenty of third-quarter hustle. They broke a 33-33 halftime tie on a three-point play by Dave Kamps and proceeded to score 11 unanswered points for a 44-33 lead.

After Kamps accounted for the first five, Frank DeSimone dropped in two baskets and Greg Kloiber rebounded in another. Before the Harlem Huskies could recover, Arlington had zoomed to a 15-point bulge as DeSimone, Kamps, Tom North and Dan Frase hit buckets.

The Cardinals, 5-1 on the season, enjoyed healthy leads through most of the second half against their non-conference opponent, but the Huskies, 3-1, wouldn't give up. They rallied with a flurry of points against the Arlington substitutes to make the final score closer than it really was.

Kamps and DeSimone shared Arlington scoring honors with 21 each with Kloiber tossing 12 and North 10.

Kamps' total was all the more impressive considering he sat out almost half the game with foul problems.

Frase, Arlington's fine playmaker, accounted for six assists.

Kloiber was a one-man rebounding machine, accounting for 22 of Arlington's 35. Harlem had 26.

PIRATES LOSE

Knocked down but not out, the Palatine Pirates gamely tried to overcome a 23-point halftime deficit at the hands of a visiting Loyola team. But the comeback fell short.

Connecting on close range shots and playing with far better consistency than in the first half, Pirate center Kevin McKenna scored a game high 22-points to close the final Loyola margin to 67-55.

"We had the best incentive ever when we came out in the second half. All the guys had to do was to look at the score," Pirate coach Ed Moliter said. "There was only one way to go . . . and they showed a lot of character by coming back as they did."

THE PIRATES (1-4) second half surge started with a string of four layups as Loyola's margin was whittled to 50-35 with 4:58 remaining in the third quarter.

"We started to play better defense than we had in the first half and we were just more aggressive as a team," Moliter added. "The close range shots that didn't fall in the early going began to go the other way."

The momentum changed drastically at the outset of the final quarter as McKenna scored three unanswered baskets to narrow Loyola's margin to 14, 65-51. The senior pivot man scored 14-points in the second half in leading the Pirates to a respectable comeback.

Balancing out the scoring for the Pirates in the second half was Doug Buenzow and Craig Long, who scored 12 and eight points respectively.

"We kept our poise in the second half and weren't hesitant about what we were going to do with the ball. We just did it," Moliter said.

Loyola's 23-point halftime margin was aided by balanced scoring by its three guards and close range tip-ins by center Tom Condon.

Leading 7-2 in the opening minutes, the Loyola center ran off a string of three baskets to start the Ramblers attack. Condon, who finished with 18 points on the night, led the way with 12-first half points.

FREMD FALLS, 67-53

Elgin Larkin poured through 23 points in the third period and went on to post a 67-53 victory over stubborn Fremd in Elgin.

The Royals trailed 26-24 at halftime but clamped on an effective press that helped turn the game around. Fremd only cashed three times from the field in a 12-point third period.

"Larkin is a good club, a physical team," said Fremd coach Mo Tharp, "But that final spread doesn't really indicate the type of game it was.

"I thought that overall we had a pretty good team effort. I'm not discouraged. We're going to win our share."

Jeff Curtin paced the balanced Vikings with 13 points. Craig Rawlins chipped in with 10, Dale Hallberg 9 and Kerry Field 8.

Mike Henry, Elgin Larkin's 6-foot-9 All-State candidate, poured through 18 points.

Six tests tonight

A limited schedule of nonconference basketball action is on tap for tonight, highlighted by a rare visit to the area by Freeport, whose team will meet the Hoffman Estates Hawks at 8 p.m. at the Hawk gym.

Other games will find Elgin at Hersey, Rolling Meadows at St. Viator, Conant at Lake Park, and Elk Grove at Wheeling. The game at Wheeling is a nonconference cross-over match.

All games are scheduled to begin at approximately 8 p.m., but times are dictated by the length of the preliminary contest.

In college play Harper travels to Waukesha Tech.

Free throw contest planned for Sunday

The Arlington Heights Elks Lodge No. 2048 is again hosting this area's National Hoop Shoot Free Throw Contest Sunday at 3 p.m. at the Birchwood Gym at 435 W. Illinois Ave. in Palatine.

Chairman Len Larsen is inviting all boys and girls from Palatine and Arlington Heights to enter the contest, which will have separate divisions for boys and girls in the 8-to-9, 10-11, and 12-13 age groups.

The top finishers in each bracket will advance to district competition. State, regional and national meets will follow.

No entry fee is required. Participants should be at the Birchwood Gym by 2:45 p.m. They should bring gym shoes.

Notre Dame ends Lions' unbeaten streak, 68-49

by DOUG PALM

"You play exactly as you practice."

A disappointed, but philosophical Ron Crtgier pointed to the time-worn, but ever applicable adage as the main reason for St. Viator's 68-49 loss to Notre Dame Friday night in Niles.

The loss snapped a season-opening four game winning streak for the Lions and spoiled the opening of the 1976-77 East Suburban Catholic Conference play.

"You have to be hungry, in order to be successful," said Cregier, "and we obviously were not."

A HARD-WORKING zone defense forced the Lions out of their normal offensive pattern and into numerous turnovers.

"We didn't lose our poise," Cregier observed afterwards, "we simply forced our game. We let them dictate the tempo."

The Lions jumped out to an early 4-0 lead before the host Dons retaliated with 14 unanswered points.

Normally a deliberate, patterned team on offense, Notre Dame relied on a running, fast breaking attack throughout the contest to keep the Lions off stride.

TRAILING 16-8 after one period, St. Viator made a brief run at Notre Dame in the second quarter. Paul Wiloff, St. Viator's 6-7 junior center, began to assert himself on the offensive boards with three baskets, including a three-point play, to bring the Lions within 20-15.

Notre Dame, however, was able to withstand the charge and left the court at halftime with a 30-23 advantage.

Critical turnovers and several resulting breakaways prevented the Lions from drawing closer.

Both teams played to a standstill, scorewise, in the third quarter, with turnovers again undermining the Lions.

COLD SHOOTING and floor miscues plagued both teams in the opening minutes of the final session. Nearly 2:58 elapsed before the Dons found the rangt for a 49-38 lead.

The Lions could come not closer than eight points, at 51-43, before Notre Dame, using the foul line, closed out the Lions.

Brendan McCarthy, a 6-foot-6 center led Notre Dame with 18 points, while Wiloff and Steve Notaro tallied 11 apiece for St. Viator.

Big Ten official to speak today at contest luncheon

Charles D. Henry II, assistant commissioner of the Big Ten Conference, will be the featured speaker today at The Herald's "Pick The Winners" luncheon at Howard Johnson's Motor Lodge, Rtes. 14 and 53 in Palatine.

Winners of the 14 weekly football contests will be special guests of The Herald, and a grand prize trip for two to the Rose Bowl will be presented.

Herald Sports Editor Bob Frisk will serve as master of ceremonies with the program getting under way at 1 p.m.

Henry, the luncheon speaker, joined the Big Ten staff in June of 1974 as assistant to Commissioner Wayne Duke. He is a native of Conway, Ark. and was graduated from Philander Smith College (Little Rock). He received his master's and doctoral degrees from the University of Iowa.

The weekly Herald "Pick The Winners" contest listed 20 games and a tie-breaker. Readers were asked to select the winners, and there were approximately 1,000 entries each week.

Charles Henry

The weekly winners, who will assemble at Howard Johnson's today and learn who will be taking a trip to the Rose Bowl, are Donald Peters, Jim Holan, Susan Holan, Steve Chernicky, Jr., Joe Paolella, Dennis Lynch, Dave Otto, Brian Holan, Doug Henderson, Michaeline Pestka, Bob Kasper and Marci Hermanson.

Stuart R. Paddock, Jr., president and publisher of Paddock Publications, will make the drawing.

Good West fight not good enough

by JIM O'DONNELL

The Maine West Warriors have got to know how Ken Norton feels after he fights Muhammad Ali.

For the second time during this young basketball season, the Warriors lost a tough decision to the powerful host Hawks, 55-48, in the Central Suburban League opener for both clubs.

"They sure made us sweat again," sighed victorious Hawk coach Quitmann Sullins after the contest. 'Just like when we beat them by one point last week, we were sluggish and they played tough defense. Fortunately we were able to open up their zone a little during the last quarter."

SURPRISINGLY, none of Maine South's towering behemoths forced the Warrior defense to loosen. Instead, it was the smallest man on the floor, Hawk guard Pat Nugent, whose outside drilling broke open a tight contest.

"No question, Nugent's shooting hurt us," Maine West coach Gaston Freeman retrospected. "We contained them inside and he got a hot hand outside."

Sullins was in complete agreement on this point. "Nugent's shooting allowed us to split their zone. When he got hot, they had to play him honest and that took some pressure off our guys underneath."

LIKE THE Ford-Carter election, the outcome of the game was in doubt until the end. Maine West opened up a three-point lead 40-37, at the outset of the final period when playmaker Tim Logissz dropped a 20-footer from the balcony.

But then Nugent did his stuff. In a space of 50 seconds, the dynamo sunk an 18-footer and bagged three free throws to put the Hawks in front to stay.

With the steam less intense under the Hawk basket, their big men applied the coup de grace. Tom Barr, who scored 24 points against Maine West in the first encounter, hit two short jumpers, and Jeff Baker added a bucket and four free throws down the stretch to settle the issue.

FOR MAINE WEST, Logissz and multi-sports star Bob Zuccarini shared top scoring honors with 12 points each. Scrappy Bob Anderson was the only other Warrior in double figures with 11.

The loss extended the Warriors' losing skein to four. But Sullins had this bit of advice for future Warrior opponents:

"You can't underrate Maine West. We were able to capitalize on a few things at the end. But I'm just glad that we won because they put up a good fight."

Cordes sparks Stevenson

Mark Cordes hauled down 14 rebounds and threw in 28 points Friday night to lead Stevenson to a league opening 77-40 waltz past Wauconda.

Cordes hit on 12 of 17 shots from the field and collected five points during the third period to help the Patriots pull away. Wauconda trailed by only six at halftime but were outscored 20-10 in the third stanza.

Mike Blaha backed up Cordes with 15 points and Andy Farrissey contributed 10 points and eight assists to the Stevenson cause.

As a team the Patriots hit at a better-than-50 per cent clip afield with 32 buckets in 63 attempts. The victory evened up their overall record for the season at 2-2.

Snowmobilers trail in facilities contest

LAW ENFORCEMENT officers are constantly on the move to patrol and aid snowmobilers. A routine measure is to check for proper registration and licensing while on the trail.

The sudden arrival of snow the latter part of the week found snowmobilers rubbing their hands together in anticipation of another season on motorized skis.

But inhibiting the flow of adrenalin is the stark realization that Illinois ranks near the bottom in snowmobile facilities and trails among the snowbelt states.

As one observer sarcastically stated, "Illinois snowmobilers are lucky. They live next door to Wisconsin."

NORTHERN Illinois receives enough of the white powder to merit more attention for the snowmobile fraternity which numbers well over 50,000 registered owners and nearly 100 organized clubs.

But the belt-driven machines have left a trail of controversy in their path that may account for the lack of sufficient facilities or at least the absence of initiative to fund further development of trails.

Environmentalists have determined that snowmobiles aren't exactly a wintertime canoe that passes through a stream or river without leaving a trace of existence.

Snowmobiles are gasoline-powered and aside from requiring about four inches of snow to operate effectively, generally must have a 10-foot wide "road."

PERHAPS THE popularity of snowmobiles was too dramatic. Fifteen years ago, there were less than 500 machines in the entire country. Ten years ago, the number was still only 25,000.

Today, there are close to 2 million nationwide. And the demand is still exceeding the supply from manufacturers who have blossomed overnight.

The snowmobile attraction, in a sense, is a unique form of liberation during an otherwise stagnant, hibernation period.

It's shifting weight in harmony with an irregular landscape while the snowmobile whisks through the frozen silence of winter at speeds of 30 miles per hour. The experience cannot be duplicated.

UNFORTUNATELY, the snowmobile's performance is much more predictable than that of its driver.

Like the "slob hunter" who is giving that sport a black eye, irresponsible actions by snowmobilers have invited the heavy hand of the law and an outcry from conservation groups.

The stories that reach the public's attention are usually strong in opposition to the snowmobilers plight.

Snowmobilers are decapitated by barb-wire fences, they harass exhausted wildlife and they drown by attempting to negotiate open water.

THEY HIT CARS and trains, kiss trees and abutments, tear down farmer's fences and vandalize summer homes.

But as is the case in hunting, the few snowmobilers who are abusing the sport are creating headaches for the vast majority.

Illinois has just nine state areas where public snowmobiling is permitted and only one — Hennepin Canal Parkway — that is groomed and marked well enough to merit a place among the top trails in the Midwest.

The money is available. The state has a special snowmobile fund that is derived from a $6 registration fee paid by snowmobile owners every two years. The balance in the fund as of Sept. 1 was $256,700.

A SPOKESMAN for the Illinois Dept. of Conservation explained, "It's not enough to purchase additional land, but too much to have sitting around."

The state took in $117,400 last year alone and spent $35,000 in law enforcement, maintenance, administrative costs and printing stickers and literature.

Only one grant request was made — that a $12,600 application by the Kane County Forest Preserve District.

In a specially-prepared list of accomplishments issued by the Illinois Dept. of Conservation that encompassed last year, snowmobiling development was nowhere to be found.

Ignoring snowmobiles will not make them go away.

State opens winter sites

Fourteen Department of Conservation properties will be open to cross country skiing this winter, and nine sites will provide trails for snowmobiling. Some of the areas will be open to both activities simultaneously.

The number of sites open to cross country skiing has increased by two over last year. Snowmobilers will use the same sites as last winter.

Areas open to cross country skiing, and trail lengths are:

Spring Lake Conservation Area, near Manito in Tazewell County — 3-4 miles; Morrison-Rockwood State Park, near Morrison in Whiteside County — 3 miles; Argyle Lake State Park, at Colchester, McDonough County — 4 miles; Johnson-Sauk Trail State Park, southwest of Kewanee — 8-10 miles; White Pines Forest State Park, near Mt. Morris, Ogle County — 4 miles; Mississippi Palisades State Park, north of Savanna, Carroll County — 8 miles; Lake Le-Aqua-Na State Park, Stephenson County — 4 miles.

Also: Rock Cut State Park, north of Rockford — 10 miles; Chain O'Lakes State Park, Lake and McHenry Counties — 4 miles; Moraine Hills State Park, near McHenry — 11 miles; Illinois-Michigan Canal Parkway, near Morris, Grundy County — 20 miles; and Silver Springs State Park, west of Yorkville in Kendall County — 3 miles.

SNOWMOBILE Trails will be open at Silver Spring (4 miles), Rock Cut (15 miles), Mississippi Palisades (330-acre field), Johnson-Sauk Trail (18 miles), Chain O' Lakes (all frozen lakes and rivers), and Kankakee River (2.5 miles) State Parks, and the Illinois-Michigan Canal (20 miles). Snowmobiling also will be allowed on 25 miles of firebreaks at Big River State Forest, in northwest Henderson County, and along 53 miles of Hennepin Canal Parkway towpaths, across Rock Island, Bureau, Henry and Whiteside Counties.

Warming shelters for cross country skiers are available at Johnson-Sauk Trail, Kankakee River, Illinois-Michigan Canal, and Silver Springs State Parks. At Rock Cut State Park, the Visitor Center will be open to cold skiers.

Snowmobilers will find warming facilities at Mississippi Palisades, Kankakee River, Johnson-Sauk Trail and Illinois-Michigan Canal State Parks.

Bears travel to to tackle Seattle

by JOHN ENGSTROM

SEATTLE—Chicago's turnaround from a "cheap shot team" to a "line up and come at you" squad impresses seattle coach Jack Patera.

"They've done one tremendous job there," says Patera of Bears General Manager Jim Finks and coach Jack Pardee, who have turned a 4-10 team into a 6-6 squad with a chance for its first winning season in nine years.

Pater's 2-10 Seahawks, on the other hand, meet the Bears in the Kingdome Sunday with only two more chances to win their third game and match the record of every NFL expansion club except one even bigger loser.

"IF WE PLAY as well as we can, we have just as good an opportunity to win the game as the Bears," he analyzed. "If we come up to the level of our game with Minnesota (a 27-20 loss) then we have a very good opportunity of winning two more games."

Asked if the Bears were a "cheap shot team" over the past decade, Patera agreed "they were — and they got called a lot for it, too."

"But they have changed from an 'if we lose to you, we'll beat you up' team to a much more solid organization. Now it's mostly just line up and come at you," added the Seahawks coach, who saw a lot of Chicago from his post as Minnesota defensive line coach for seven years.

The improved Bear defense has allowed Chicago to adopt a game plan gaining favor in the NFL.

"THEY PLAY very conservatively," Patera explained. "They figure, 'We'll play so conservatively that you'll make a mistake and we'll take advantage of it and win.' "

He credits Chicago's defensive intensity to "an attitude that most people have to learn coming into the league and that's playing 100 per cent all through the game."

Much of the Chicago offense is a version of Watch Walter Run — Walter being Walter Payton, who has turned in six 100-yard games and 12 touchdowns as the league's top runner.

The second-year pro has totaled 1,158 yards for the season, only 74 away from erasing Gale Sayers' single-season Chicago rushing record. Fullback Roland Harper has added 540 yards as a potent second-strike force.

PATERA SAYS Payton "deserves to be the league's leading rusher" because of his ability to break tackles, his great balance and a quickness that rarely gives a defensive player a good shot at him.

Bear quarterback Bob Avellini's passing game has been conservative, going for the short gainer, rarely long. But his completion average is a poor 45.2 per cent and Patera said he "isn't scrambling around so much since he got banged up a bit" earlier in the year.

Seattle, as usual, will rely on the passing and scrambling of first year quarterback Jim Zorn, who must cut down on his interception tendency, and the running and catching of rookie Sherman Smith, who has blossomed the past few games.

HERE IS A handsome grouping called Gallery Wicker by Ficks Reed Co. Five or 10 years ago, it would have been designated "casual" furniture. Today's market has found a proper place for the quality and good looks of lines similar to this.

Moving up

Rattan, wicker pieces no longer casual

Your home

by Carolyn Murray

One of the most interesting new phenomena in home furnishings history is the upward movement of furniture that used to be the second-class citizen of the industry. The category includes many objects and pieces that were labeled "outdoor" or "casual."

Rattan and wicker never found "parlor" room in yesterday's interiors. Although the metal and glass concepts often made it to a lanai or covered porch, and occasionally into the dining room, there was a lack of appreciation for their permanent, everyday use.

Now the wickers, reed and rattans are really being taken seriously by designers and manufacturers. Prices reflect this awareness, too. And fine furniture makers, such as the McGuire Co. and Ficks Reed, have price tags that truly place their lines in a high-level environment.

ONE EXAMPLE of how the woven, natural materials have been upgraded is shown today. Part of "Gallery Wicker" by Ficks Reed Co., this dining group heralds the new high-style look you can expect to see in "casual" furnishings.

An impressive 44-by 74-inch table features a ¾-inch plate-glass top with beveled edges. This top sits on interesting handwoven diamonds of wicker that provide a nice see-through surprise for the eye.

The chairs are described as double-walled woven wicker frames and they are shown here in a fresh new idea, plaid upholstery.

The subtle arm contours permit these chairs to rest at ease as part of a living room grouping in which guests can be comfortably seated.

And again, while the price tag is high for so-called "casual," it's equal in value to any other finely made chair or table. When furniture is being examined for purchase, it's the craftsmanship, the quality of the materials used and the workroom perfection on upholstery that should be checked out.

Mortgage group slates changes in action system

Early in 1977, the Federal National Mortgage Assoc. will implement major changes in its free market system auction, through which FNMA-approved lenders throughout the country bid to sell home mortgages to the corporation, FNMA Chairman and President Oakley Hunter said.

The FMS revisions will apply both to the auction for government-backed mortgages and to conventionally financed mortgages.

Hunter said the changes keep the concept of setting a maximum bid amount while at the same time recognizing that some approved mortgage sellers may need more FNMA commitment funds than current restrictions allow. The aim of the modifications, he said, is to make the auction system as equitable as possible both to large and small companies who use the corporation's secondary market facilities.

A basic component of the changes, which will be implemented in conjunction with revised FNMA selling and servicing contracts with its lenders, is a new definition of "seller" for the purposes of bidding in the FMS auction. Under the new system a "seller" will be defined either as:

- A single operating entity, approved as a FNMA Seller, which is in no way affiliated with another FNMA Seller.
- A group of operating entities, each of which are approved FNMA Sellers in their own right, which are directly or indircetly affiliated.

Entities which were formed primarily for purposes of obtaining additional bidding rights under the former free market system will not be reapproved. It is anticipated, however, the new bidding structure will lessen the need for such entities.

Under the current free market system, FNMA conducts separate auctions for FNMA commitments to purchase government-backed and conventional home mortgages. Whereas the current FNMA auction system permits each seller to make only one competitive bid per auction up to a maximum of $3 million, the new procedure will allow a seller to make up to five competitive bids in each auction, each of which could be for an amount up to the current maximum $3 million and for different yields.

Easy to put up, too

Redwood paneling adds beauty

Redwood lumber wall paneling you can design and install yourself will add natural beauty, heat and sound insulation, and resale value to your house. Individual redwood boards, traditionally the finest wall paneling, are easy to handle and nail, and allow you to mix different lumber dimensions, textures, grains, and patterns to make each paneling project unique.

For dressing up odd corners, lopsided walls, and transforming little-used rooms into activity centers, rich redwood lumber paneling complements glass, stone, fabrics and metals, and requires less furniture to complete room decor. A redwood paneled ceiling improves roof insulation and absorbs sound while creating a warm, intimate atmosphere.

This year, do-it-yourself paneling with redwood lumber can be fairly easy with some advanced planning, a little help from your local redwood dealer, and the simple step-by-step instructions contained in a new brochure from the California Redwood Association, "Panel a Room with Redwood Lumber."

PANELING CAN be applied vertically, horizontally, or diagonally, with about 15 per cent more lumber required for diagonal paneling. You can nail and glue boards directly to studs, plasterboard, or plaster, or nail them onto a framework of 2 by 4 furring stirps that even up wall surfaces.

The two knot-free redwood lumber grades best for paneling are Clear All Heart, naturally decay and insect resistant, and Clear grade, with lively cream-colored sapwood streaks. Both redwood grades should be specified kiln dried for outstanding stability and rigidity, even after hears of exposure to heat and humidity extremes.

Different redwood board patterns, textures, and woodgrains offer many design possibilities. Boards with a tongue and groove or shiplap pattern fit together to create v-grooves or accent lines. Tongue and groove boards can also fit together flush so they show no lines, while boards with sharply grooved channel rustic patterns create strong v-groove accents.

Woodgrain patterns include subtle, formal vertical grain, showing the wood's parallel annual growth rings, while flat grain lumber, cut tangent to growth rings, has wavy, marbled patterns. Smooth textured lumber emphasizes grain and color, while a resawn texture creates soft shadows. You can even order redwood lumber smooth on one side and resawn on the other so it's reversible.

REDWOOD BOARDS are usually 4, 6 or 8 inches wide, 3/8 to 1 inch thick (all normal dimensions), and available up to 20 feet long, a design advantage over all other woods for rooms with high ceilings. You can make your own finishing details — redwood moldings, casings, trim, windows and door jambs — in many shapes and sizes. Built-in shelves, counters, and cabinets can be added as desired.

REDWOOD LUMBER paneling with built-in shelves and counter create an attractive home office and activity center.

Redwood takes and holds finishes better than other woods, but requires no finishes on surfaces away from grease, moisture, and dirt. If desired, lightly pigmented stains, waxes, and transparent sealers that preserve grain and texture offer protection and extra years of outstanding performance.

For ceilings, trim, walls and room dividers that receive occasional light cleaning, a clear flat lacquer forms a protective film that deepens wood tones. Wax applied over lacquer adds soft, rich luster. For kitchen and bath areas, three or more coats of clear, flat or satin textured polyurethane form a tough transparent film that resists waterspots and hard scrubbing.

Fine redwood paneling deserves proper tools, nails, and other materials your local redwood dealer can help you assemble. For example, finishing or casing nails are fine for paneling in most areas, but around windows and in humid rooms, noncorrosive hot-dipped galvanized, stainless steel or aluminum nails last longer and are virtually rustproof. For gluing lumber, use adhesive clearly marked for interior paneling, not contact cement.

It's best to order redwood lumber two or three weeks in advance of scheduled workdays. Some simple calculations will help you figure how much you need. For example, paneling a 100-square foot wall with 6-inch wide boards requires 115 board feet or 230 linear feet of lumber.

Give convenient way of life

Popularity of townhomes rising

Many people who have the option of buying single-family detached homes are buying townhouses instead because of the convenient way of life they provide.

"We have people living here who could afford homes selling for $70,000 and more, but prefer the townhouse because it makes for easier living," said Pete Fleming, sales manager at New Century Town in suburban Vernon Hills.

He noted that townhouses have had a long history, going back in this country at least to the row houses of colonial Baltimore that are regarded as landmarks. In London, a townhouse in the city has long been considered among the highest symbols of social rank, and is regarded as valuable real estate.

EVEN TODAY, although it's true there are some very inexpensive townhouses, there are some very expensive ones in the Chicago area, ranging up to $175,000 in the city itself. At New Century Town, townhouses in the Republic Square neighborhood range from $45,250 to $55,100.

"We have all kinds of people buying townhouses — young singles, marrieds, families, and older couples," Fleming said. "Some of these people may buy a townhouse so they can build an equity for a single-family home. Others regard a townhouse as a permanent style of housing, suitable for any and all stages of family life."

For example, at Republic Square, a neighborhood of 90 townhouses in New Century Town, the age range of buyers stretches from 20 to over 50, with about one-third in the 26-to 35 category. About two-thirds of the homes are owned by married couples; the others are owned by singles or divorced persons.

"I'D SAY A third of the buyers here have children, averaging out to one child per home. Their ages range from under 2 years old to 18 and over, although the largest group is from 3 to 14," Fleming said.

As for incomes, these range mostly from $13,000 to $24,000 for individuals, he reported. Slightly less than a third of Republic Square homes are owned by husbands and wives with combined incomes.

Occupations cover a broad spectrum. Among the men, there are managers, engineers, a doctor, military personnel, a truck driver, an insurance underwriter, and a pastor. The occupations represented by women include teachers, nurses, sales personnel, a computer operator, bus driver, editors, and homemakers, who account for half the women living in Republic Square.

Interestingly enough, there's a half-and-half split between previous renters and previous owners, indicating that townhouses have much to offer to people of either background, Fleming said.

"IF YOU'VE formerly lived in an apartment, then you're apt to be favorably impressed with the spaciousness a townhouse offers," he noted. "And if you're coming from a single-family house, then you may be pleasantly surprised at the similarity between a single-family house and a townhouse."

A case in point is the John Dewey townhouse at Republic Square. The major feature of this model is the 13-by-10½-foot "country kitchen," which actually is a large family room adjacent to the 11-by-10 foot kitchen itself.

"People comment on the fact that you can go right to the country kitchen from the front entry without passing through either the living room or dining room," Fleming said. "This is a sign of a good traffic pattern."

The country kitchen has sliding glass doors leading out to the rear patio, as has the 10½-by-10½-foot dining room. Other features of the main floor include a large entry foyer, a powder room convenient to the foyer, and a 17-by-12-foot living room with plenty of wall space for furniture and picture arrangements.

UPSTAIRS THERE are three bedrooms and two full baths. The master bedroom is 16 by 11 feet and has its own bath as well as a walk-out balcony. The other bedrooms are 13 by 11 feet and 12 by 10 feet.

THIS 'COUNTRY KITCHEN' — a combination of a 13-by-10½-foot family room with an 11-by-10-foot kitchen — is among the features of a three-bedroom townhouse in the Republican Square neighborhood of New Century Town, Vernon Hills. United Development is the builder.

Fowl decoys true samples of American folk art

with Grace Carolyn

At this time of year, nearly every morning I am awakened by a far-off sounding chorus of honks and quacks that signifies the presence of ducks and geese in the wildlife areas which abound in southern Illinois, as the birds forage in the cornfields for left-over grain.

It always seems a bit callous to lure the game with baits of corn and with decoys, in order to bring them close enough to kill, but that's the way of the sport called hunting. Personally I only like birds one way — on the wing — and when I see a hunter return empty-handed, I confess to a feeling of relief. My husband accuses me of a lack of compassion for the chicken.

But these are my personal and not very popular sentiments. Bird hunting as sport and for food has been known since early Egyptian days, and using decoys is a centuries-old practice. Decoys have been very popular in the United States for the past hundred years or so, when a burgeoning populace in need of a greater and inexpensive source of meat took to game hunting, assuming an endless bounty of birds. Now, of course, the number taken is controlled by law.

FOR MANY years decoys were handmade, but mass production was then used to meet the demand and decoys were roughed out by lathes. Still, most work of finishing, sanding and painting was done by hand. So these are truly examples of 19th and early 20th Century American folk art, eagerly sought by collectors.

THIS MASON MALLARD drake decoy, a factory-made model with hollow body, hand-painted and finished, is in very good condition despite use. (Picture and some information from Newspaper Enterprise Association)

Mason's Decoy Factory and the J.N. Dodge Co. were both located in Detroit, and the Stevens Decoy Factory in Weedsport, N.Y. These three are considered the most important decoy makers and met an almost unbelievable demand for many years. Professional market hunters preferred the hand-carved decoy, but the need for the more inexpensive factory model continued until 1918 when Congress passed the Migratory Bird Treaty Act. Factory decoys were graded by design, size and quality. One could purchase solid decoys or hollow, with glass or tack eyes, and they could be bought for from $2.50 to $12 a dozen. Many patents were issued for "gadget" models such as the metal on a wooden base or a folding tin shore bird decoy.

The "confidence" decoy was usually a gull, which is known to be a wary bird, and its presence was thought to ease the minds of the ducks and geese. The "tip up" is actually half a decoy, the tail section mounted on a stick, to give the appearance of a bird feeding. Silhouette decoys are tin or fiber board flat models, stuck in the mud on the shores of ponds.

THE HAND-CARVED decoy, quite rare and expensive now, was meant not as an artistic expression but for utility. These decoys were realistic with no thought to being decorative, and there was little uniformity, since each carver had his own idea of a duck's appearance. Being able to identify the carver and the region adds to the value (sometimes hundreds of dollars).

There are several things to watch for if you are considering buying a decoy. They were usually made in two sections, head and body. Often the head has been broken and a different or newer one put on. Watch the weathering and type of paint to see they are the same. Check for new glue or nail holes and be suspicious of repainted decoys. It is better to have an old worn one with original paint than one which has been gussied up.

Get to know decoys by studying, visiting museums and talking to advanced collectors. An excellent resource book is "The Art of the Decoy: American Bird Carvings" by Adele Earnest, which is in our library and probably yours.

Here's how to announce engagement

Paddock Suburban Living department is often called by those seeking information on submitting announcements for publication. We print the following for the reader's information and help.

The announcement of an engagement is always made by the parents of the engaged girl, who may either fill out an engagement form at our office or submit their own information along with a wallet sized picture of the bride-to-be.

If a wallet sized photograph is not available, a larger one can be used.

Bring or mail picture and copy to The Herald office in Arlington Heights or mail to Paddock Publications, Box 280, Arlington Heights, Ill., 60006.

Parents not using one of our forms may either write or type the information. If the announcement is submitted in hand-writing we ask that all names be printed to avoid errors. We also request that a phone number accompany the signature at the bottom of the announcement.

A glossy picture is preferable although a dull finish is acceptable. Color photos are used at the discretion of the editors depending on contrast and depth of color.

There is no charge for engagement pictures and announcements. Usually they will be printed within a week after reaching our office.

All announcements must be in our office at least six weeks before the wedding date.

Weddings

Kathleen Stasiek–Jack O'Connell

A couple who met while working for Unigard Insurance Group in Arlington Heights, Kathleen Anne Stasiek and Jack O'Connell were married Nov. 6 in St. Bartholomew Church, Chicago.

Jack, no longer with Unigard, is working now for Aetna Insurance Co., Chicago. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John J. O'Connell of Schaumburg and is a graduate of Conant High School. He also attended Northern Illinois University.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack O'Connell

Kathleen's parents are the Walter Stasieks of Arlington Heights, and she is a graduate of Notre Dame High School, Chicago.

She and Jack exchanged vows at 1:30 p.m. and then greeted 200 guests at a dinner reception at the White Eagle Restaurant, Niles.

THE BRIDE'S gown was of white chiffonette with embroidered lace and pearl trimming the bodice and also the crown headpiece which held her cathedral-length veil. Her bouquet was of white orchids, stephanotis and baby's breath.

Her twin sister, Karen Ferengul of Hoffman Estates, was matron of honor, wearing a powder blue chiffon gown with a cape to match. Her bouquet was of white mums, blue carnations and daisies.

Kathleen's other two sisters, Stacy Schemitsch, Franklin Park, and Pat Jordan, Bolingbrook, were among the bridesmaids. The others were the groom's sister, Cathy Keisler, Hoffman Estates; Nancy Nelson, Arlington Heights; and Josephine Tavolacci, Skokie. All were gowned like the matron of honor.

ALSO WEARING powder blue, topped with a white pinafore, was Leslie Schemitsch, 7, the bride's niece from Franklin Park, who served as flower girl. Ring bearer was Corey Ferengul, 5, her nephew from Hoffman Estates.

Barry Alexa of Schaumburg was Jack's best man. Groomsmen included Frank Swan, Schaumburg; Ed McConville, Hoffman Estates; Marine Lt. Tom O'Connell, the groom's brother, of Tustin, Calif.; Richard Stasiek, the bride's brother from Mount Prospect; Allen Keisler, her brother-in-law; and Jamie Keisler, her nephew.

The newlyweds honeymooned in Hawaii and Las Vegas before making their home in Schaumburg.

Mr. and Mrs. Donald P. Koller

Mary Pat McLaughlin–Donald P. Koller

At the reception following her marriage Nov. 6 to Donald Patrick Koller, the former Mary Patricia McLaughlin of Arlington Heights enjoyed a dance with her 87-year-old grandfather, Frank W. McLaughlin of Oak Brook.

The 11 a.m. nuptial mass uniting the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. William McLaughlin and the son of Ermon Koller of Winona, Minn., was performed at St. James Catholic Church in Arlington Heights. The reception took place at Allgauer's Fireside in Northbrook with 150 guests attending.

For her marriage Mary Pat wore the same gown worn by her sister, Mrs. Kathy Perko of Arlington Heights, who was matron of honor. The ivory satin dress was trimmed with Venise lace and pale apricot ribbon beading. An elbow-length double-tiered veil held in place with a lace-trimmed Juliet cap completed her ensemble. She carried a nosegay of coral roses, white Elegance carnations, stephanotis and baby's breath.

BRIDESMAIDS WERE Mollie Murphy and Pauline Sabelfeldt, Arlington Heights; Peg Hansen, Chicago; and the bride's cousin, Mary Syzmanski, Oak Park. They and the matron of honor were dressed alike in persimmon color knit gowns with matching chiffon capelets. They carried fireside baskets filled with bronze mums, miniature carnations, Mary daisies, natural wheat and baby's breath, and each wore a spring of baby's breath in her hair.

Don's brother, Steven, of Kansas City, Kan., was his best man. His cousin, Edward Hartung, River Falls, Wis.; Mary Pat's two brothers, William and Thomas; Joseph Reuter, Arcadia, Wis.; and Wallace Hindalong and Paul Kennedy, Winona, were the ushers.

After a week's honeymoon in New Orleans, the couple is back in Winona where Mary Pat works for Hal Leonard Publishing Corp. and Don for the Randall Corp.

A '72 graduate of Hersey High School, the bride earned her B.S. this year, with majors in nutrition and business administration from College of St. Theresa at Winona. Don received his degree in business administration in 1975 from Winona State University. They met while working part-time at the Randall Corp. as college students.

Kathy Ann Beck–Michael E. Knoch

Kathy Ann Beck and Michael Edward Knoch, whose wedding was Nov. 6 in St. Paul Lutheran Church, Mount Prospect, have their own home in Streamwood where they are starting married life.

Both are from Mount Prospect, Kathy the daughter of the John Becks and Mike the son of the Edward Knochs. Kathy graduated from Prospect High School in '73 and Mike in '70 and he then spent four years in the Navy.

Mike is now with Ingersoll-Rand, Elmhurst. His bride works for Hines Lumber Co., Mount Prospect.

FOR THEIR 5 p.m. candlelight wedding, Kathy chose Nancy Pittman, Glendale Heights, as maid of honor and Debbie Faltinoski, Arlington Heights, and Margie Ropella, Madison, Wis., as bridesmaids. All three were gowned alike in apple green knit jersey with forest green velvet hooded jackets, and each carried a nosegay of bronze and gold mums.

The bride's gown was of white knit jersey with lace accents, and the same type lace edged her elbow-length veil and headpiece. She carried a cascade of white roses, orchids and Starburst mums.

Mr. and Mrs. Michael E. Knoch

Kathy had two flower girls, Jenni Morris, 7, of San Jose, Calif., the groom's niece, and Linda Weaver, 8, of Wildwood, the bride's cousin.

DAVE WILTSE, Arlington Heights, was best man, with John Beck, the bride's brother, and Chuck Morris, Mike's brother-in-law from San Jose, as groomsmen.

A reception for 185 guests followed at Old Orchard Country Club, and the newlyweds then left for two weeks in Florida.

Basic training over for women soldiers

by LINDA KUNTZ LOGAN

They are not complaining so much now that it's all over, and most of them even say it was fun.

That's before they start remembering those long, cold, marches at 5 a.m., and the aching feet. It's before they start remembering how hard it was to climb the obstacle course or the shouting drill sergeants breathing down their necks.

The Army's experiment in giving women the same basic training as men is over. The compiling of data to determine its success has begun. Initial observations indicate the Army may be in for some surprises.

The test, called Basic Initial Entry Training, or BIET for short, pitted about 800 female recruits against the same number of men o undergo the same basic training.

DURING THE seven-week course, the women threw hand grenades, underwent long field marches, did the "men's pushups" ininstead of the women's simpler version. They learned hand-to-hand combat. They underwent live fire. They went on maneuvers.

It was a first for the Army — an experiment to see if women

Holy Cow! It's an open house

The St. James Women's Club is arranging an open house at the Holy Cow specialty shop for next Thursday, Friday and Sunday. The shop is located just north of St. James Catholic Church at 837 N. Arlington Heights Rd., Arlington Heights.

Coffee and cookies will be served to visitors all three days. They may browse through the display of handmade toys, religious items, antiques and Christmas gifts Thursday and Friday from 9:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. and Sunday from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m.

On Sunday (Dec. 12) co-author Joan Wester Anderson will be present to autograph copies of her book, "Love, Lollipops and Laundry."

A Palatine housewalk

"Christmas in the Country" is the theme of Northwest Suburban Montessori School's housewalk, boutique and bake sale Saturday, Dec. 11 in the Plum Grove area of Palatine. Five homes will be presented from 10 to 3 p.m., with refreshments being served.

Tickets at $3.50 may be purchased the morning of the walk at the Plum Grove Club, where maps will be given out, or prior to the walk by calling the school at 259-6044.

Happenings

A discotheque date

New Perspective, a social organization for single professionals and executives ages 25-50, will hold a discotheque party Sunday, Dec. 12 from 5 to 9 p.m.

There will be music and dancing at Bananas, a private club reserved for members and guests of New Perspective. A donation from the proceeds will go to the Neediest Children's Christmas Fund.

Those interested should send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to New Perspective, 9462 Bay Colony Dr., Des Plaines, Ill., 60016.

The doctor says

by Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

Blood sugar tests can be misleading

Can a person be a diabetic with a normal fasting blood sugar level? I have several well-meaning friends who tell me the glucose tolerance test doesn't mean anything.

After a two-hour glucose tolerance test my blood sugar always goes high and spills sugar in the urine. My fasting blood sugar is always near normal.

My last two glucose tolerance tests were 109 fasting and 230 after a two-hour glucose tolerance test and three months later, 110 and 218. How high does it have to go before medication is needed? My weight is a normal 115 pounds.

I hope your well-meaning friends are better friends than they are doctors. Many diabetics have normal fasting blood sugar levels. In these patients the challenge with glucose results in an bnormally high and sustained level of blood sugar. If you mean your high levels were present at the two-hour interval after taking glucose, you definitely in the diabetic group.

Terminology changes and one can never be sure even what another doctor means, it has changed so often. But in a person with an abnormal diabetic type response to a glucose tolerance test, the term chemical diabetes is sometimes used. Such individuals may be entirely asymptomatic.

Glucose tolerance tests can be misleading unless the patient is properly prepared. If he avoids sweets and carbohydrates before the examination, he may have a diabetic type (starvation diabetes) response that could lead to an incorrect diagnosis.

How high does one's blood sugar have to be before beginning treatment? Opinions differ, but in an adult with no symptoms or evidence of damage most doctors prefer not to use insulin or medicines if the levels can be reasonably controlled by diet. Weight reduction helps in obese patients.

WHEN OBESITY is not a factor, as may be true in your case, it is still wise to change the diet so that you do not get any concentrated carbohydrates, specifically sugar, sweets, honey, jellies, jams, candies and sweets that cause the blood sugar to rise sharply. You should use vegetables, fruits and cereals though. The meals should be equally divided to avoid an overload on your insulin production system.

Then if you are spilling less than 20 grams of sugar in your urine for a 24-hour period, you are probably still doing all right. Most doctors do not like your blood sugar to be too high as that leads to complications, including vascular changes in the eye that could lead to blindness.

In normal kidneys glucose starts spilling into the urine when the blood level is around 170. If the rise above these levels is of short duration, you don't lose much glucose. Even normal people may have sugar in the urine after taking in an extra large amount of sweets.

Since your fasting blood sugar is normal, it is probable that your blood sugar level is within near normal levels before each meal. That is usually satisfactory.

Since you are not taking medicines, you might get some real benefit out of exercise which also lowers the blood sugar. Individuals taking medicine, though, should be aware that exercises may decrease their requirements for the daily amount of medicine.

To give you more information on diabetes I am sending you The Health Letter number 3-11, Diabetes, Diagnosis, Prevention, and Management. Others who want this information can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Just send your letter to me in care of Paddock Publications, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019.

Four ways to remove film from glassware

Dear Dorothy: Please tell me how to remove the film on my glasses and other glassware. It must be the result of an old dishwasher I used the past four years. The way they look I can't serve a drink from them. I've tried baking soda, scouring powder and even steel wool pads with no luck. — Roos van Leewen

Although the country's largest glass manufacturer says that when this "weathering" occurs nothing much can be done about it, any number of determined people keep on experimenting. If any of the suggested methods work for you, the best advice is not to go back to dishwashing these particular glasses. Many people with valuable old glasses wash them by hand with a good dishwashing liquid and use the dishwasher for their standard, everyday glasses. So saying, here are four methods people say have worked for them: (1) Let the glass stand in an enzyme pre-soak solution for 48 hours; (2) same thing with a solution of water and household ammonia; (3) use a detergent solution with vinegar and torn bits of newspaper and let stand for 10 minutes; (4) use a vinegar solution with rice, shake it up and then wash by hand.

Dear Dorothy: A friend wrote me that she heard you can freeze eggs by wrapping them individually and freezing them right in the shell. Have you heard of this method? — Sharon Garber

Have no desire to hurt anyone's feelings, but it's nonsense. The eggs would burst in the freezer.

Dear Dorothy: For the last two years I've been involved in plant safety work and while I'm hardly an expert in applications to the home, I see a relationship. Seems to me that too many people I see working at do-it-yourself projects fail to take adequate precautions — such as covering their faces when working with wall spackling and so on, wearing protective gloves and glasses. You ought to look into this and give readers some counsel. — Harlan Morris

You've given all of us a good start. There's no question people being too casual about work around the home. Many spackling materials, for instance, contain asbestos; the paint and varnish removers all carry warnings about dangerous fumes; on and on. All these products probably ought to have adequate printed instructions attached to each package. It would cost added money, of course, but the long-range benefits for consumers would be well worth it.

(Mrs. Ritz welcomes questions and hints. If a personal reply is required, please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope. Write to Dorothy Ritz in care of Suburban Living, Paddock Publications, Box 280, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60006.)

Warm news on a cold winter day

Bingham-Gierek

Mr. and Mrs. C.L. Bingham of Arlington Heights announce their daughter Karen's engagement to Eugene G. Gierek, son of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene J. Gierek of Olympia Fields, Ill. No wedding date has been set.

The engaged pair both attend Eastern Illinois University, where Karen is majoring in computer management and Gene in finance. She is a graduate of Rolling Meadows High School.

Spiel-Habenicht

Planning a January 1977 wedding are Susan Ann Spiel of Arlington Heights and Peter Habenicht of Richmond, Va. Their engagement and approaching marriage are announced by Susan's parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Spiel.

The bride-elect is attending St. Mary's College, Notre Dame, Ind., since graduating in 1974 from Hersey High School. Peter attends Notre Dame University.

Folina-Raymond

The engagement of Lisa Marie Folina to Patrick Roland Raymond, son of the Albert Raymonds of Barrington, is announced by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph J. Folina of Palatine.

The wedding is planned for next November.

Since graduating last year from Palatine High School, Lisa is enrolled in the medical office assistant program at Harper College and works at Northwest Community Hospital as a phlebotomist. Her finance, a '74 graduate of Fremd High, studied at Harper and is now a trade checker for the Chicago Board of Trade.

Logan-Pollard

Mr. and Mrs. John A. Logan of La Jolla, Calif., announce the engagement of their daughter, Marleen Patricia, to David John Pollard, son of Mr. and Mrs. Howard L. Pollard of Arlington Heights. The couple plan a May '77 wedding close to Memorial Day, the date significant because the concept for a national Memorial Day was proposed by Marleen's great-great-grandfather, Gen. John A. Logan, U.S. Senator from Illinois.

Both she and David graduated from the University of Arizona, Tucson, she in sociology and he in engineering. Also an Arlington High graduate, David works for Texas Instruments in Dallas.

Army basic training over for women can do the same things as men. The women recruits were not told they would be participating in the experiment until after they were in the Army.

Most of the women, who said they prefer to be called soldiers, agreed the cold, the food, the lack of privacy and the lack of mirrors were the worst problems.

"We went around for seven weeks not knowing how we looked," said Dorothy Smith of Helen, Ark.

Patricia Faulcon of Oxford, N.C., who said she was "a little crazier now than when I got in," said the women needed improved bathroom facilities and barracks.

"I'LL DO John's pushups but I won't sleep in his bed," she said. "Sleeping in John's barracks aint no fun."

The women were trained under male and female drill sergeants. Some recruits said they hated the female instructors and liked the men. Others said the women were harder on them, but they had more respect for their female sergeants.

"It seemed like the females were harder on us because they were trying to prove we could do it," said Cheri Kesseler of Palm Springs, Calif.

"The men drill sergeants never had anything but mean things to say to us," said another woman. "All they did was tell us they can't wait until we're gone so they would get the Joes back."

ONE INSTRUCTOR, watching the women clambering over an enormous ladder-like obstacle which was several inches too tall for the women to reach, smiled as one women heaved herself over the railing.

"Somebody forgot to tell her she couldn't do it," he said.

"I think we were shown clearly that the Army has been underestimating and underchallenging its women," said one official. "The women can obviously do a lot more than people thought."

Col. Mary Grimes, special assistant to the test director, ran the program at the fort. She said it is too early to determine how the experiment worked. But she thinks the women did well.

"THE WOMEN DID better than I expected them to. I think there was the assumption that women could not do some of these things, but they have done them."

She said the women considered the test a personal challenge.

"The motivation has been extremely high. Young people, if challenged, will rise to the occasion. I think these women have."

Grimes herself did not undergo such strenuous basic training. She's had some of it, but not all.

"Those girls are braver than I," she said.

The women themselves appeared happy the whole thing was over, and proud they had made the grade.

CLEMENTINE EVANS, of Birmingham, Ala., was angry when she discovered she was part of the experiment.

"When I first got in, it was a trip, it was really disgusting," she said. "But after a while, it was fun. I did things I never thought I could do."

Give a gift to children

The Illinois Department of Children and Family Services is requesting Christmas gifts for the more than 5,700 Chicago-area children who live in foster homes.

The department lacks funds for gift purchases for the children, who range from infants to teenagers. Footballs, baby dolls, trains and craft items are especially welcome, and check contributions may be made payable to the "Children and Family Benefit Fund."

Information is available from Anna Mae Earles, 793-3652.

Patron saint of thieves

St. Nicholas, the fourth century bishop of Myra, Turkey, who was the prototype for Santa Claus, is the patron saint of pawnbrokers, schoolboys, bankers, maidens, sailors and thieves. Unlike the plump, jolly Santa depicted on most greeting cards, St. Nicholas was believed to be thin, say Hallmark historians. (UPI)

Today is Saturday, Dec. 4, the 339th day of 1976 with 27 to follow.

The moon is approaching its full phase.

The morning stars are Mars and Saturn.

The evening stars are Venus, Mercury and Jupiter.

Those born on this date are under the sign of Sagittarius.

Actress-singer Lillian Russell was born Dec. 4, 1861.

• In 1942, President Franklin D. Roosevelt ordered liquidation of the WPA, created in 1935 in the depths of the depression to provide work for the unemployed.

• In 1965, America's Gemini 7 spaceship was launched into orbit for a then-record 14-day voyage around the earth.

A thought for the day: First American President George Washington said, "There can be no greater error than to expect or calculate upon favors from nation to nation."

Swallows work hard on nest

Andy sends the Encyclopaedia Britannica's 1976 Yearbook of Science and the Future to Shawn Lovering, 10, of Three Rivers, Calif., for her question: HOW DO SWALLOWS BUILD THEIR NESTS?

Swallows are noisy, frolicksome birds who take to the air like ducks take to the water. In fact they are ill at ease on the ground, moving quite clumsily on their weak legs. They alight only to gather materials for their nests. Many species of swallows build their nests out of mud and other materials. Some, however, dig holes in sandbanks, particularly on the banks of rivers. Others lay their eggs in natural hollows of rocks of trees.

One of our North American songbirds, the barn swallow, mixes straw with mud to build its nest. Both mother and father work together, filling their beaks with mud from the edges of streams, ponds and puddles. They carry their cargo to a barn, bridge, church or other building where they use their bills to place it on a beam or ledge.

To construct one tiny cup-shaped nest requires hundreds of trips. But the completed home is softly lined with feathers and hair, a lovely place to raise a family.

The barn swallow's nest is reinforced with straw, and since it is usually plastered to a rafter or beam under some cover, it rarely falls. The smaller red-rumped swallow of southern Europe, Africa and Asia, however, nests in rocks and sand or mud banks. The nest, shaped like a ball, is entered through a long tube or extension instead of from a hole on top.

The tiny 5-inch-long bank swallow nests with large colonies of its kind. Holes the size of tennis balls, one practically on top of the other, are dug in vertical sand or clay banks. Amazingly, the delicate bird scrapes out a tunnel about 2 feet deep in the hard material. At the end of the slightly upturned passage is a chamber to hold the eggs.

MILKWEED POD ORNAMENTS

Here's a good way to use dried milkweed pods you found last fall.

Spread out newspaper. Spray the pods with gold paint. Let dry. Spray the other side. Let dry.

Glue a little angel hair in each pod. Add a small Christmas figure. You may use small wood or plastic figures, package ties, or cutouts from old Christmas cards.

Arlington Heights-

We're a little hard to find, but we think you will like it that way. Our secluded neighborhood with trees and large expanse of lawn make Knob Hill the perfect place for your family.

Our apartment homes are truly spacious ranging from almost 900 sq. ft. in the 1-bedroom apt. home to about 1100 sq. ft. in the 2-bedroom apt. home.

We offer free heat, balconies or patios, air conditioning, a pool for your summer time pleasure and more that only a visit to Knob Hill will reveal.

Our 1-BR apt. homes rent for $240 per mo. Our 2-BR apt. homes rent for $285 per mo.

Call Mrs. Ross at 398-3890 for an appt. or stop out this weekend and see for yourself and discuss our liberal rental terms.

Take Arlington Hts. Rd. 1 block North of Rand Rd., (US12) to Valley Lane. Turn right 1 block to Circle Hill Dr., then right to Knob Hill.

Carter victory eliminated anti-Baptist prejudice

World of religion

by David E. Anderson

If the 1960 election eliminated anti-Catholic bigotry as a factor in national politics, the 1976 election may well go down as one that eliminated anti-Baptist prejudice.

"There is no evidence," says Albert J. Menendez, "to substantiate earlier fears that abortion, parochiaid, and anti-Baptist prejudice might influence Catholic voting behavior."

Menendez is director of research for Americans United for Separation of Church and State and he has taken a long look at the election returns, including analysis of key precincts, to see how voters' religious beliefs might have affected the outcome.

MENENDEZ SAID while "explicitly religious coting" is not a frequent occurrence in the United States, the favorable response of many Protestant — usually Republican — voters to Democrat Jimmy Carter was a major factor in the southern Baptist's victory.

Menendez said Carter won about 46 per cent of the white Protestant vote, an increase of 7 per cent over that which Democrats have garnered in the last six presidential elections.

"In the broad Evangelical constituency, Carter won at least 40 per cent of the total vote, or 6.4 million of the 16 million Evangelical votes," Menendez said.

"Carter's ability to draw Evangelical voters, coupled with a comfortable majority among Catholics, Jews, moderate Protestants and the religiously nonaffiliated, gave him a 2 million vote majority," he said. "His 94 per cent landslide among black voters was also a major factor."

IT WAS THE Catholic vote, particularly highlighted by the involvement of the nation's Roman Catholic bishops in the abortion controversy, which was watched with particular care.

"Catholics were the soft underbelly of the Carter-Mondale strategy for reconstructing the Roosevelt coalition," Menendez said. And while Carter ran some 5 or 6 per cent behind the normal Democratic pull of Catholic voters, he still won about 55 per cent of the Catholic vote.

"If the national surveys are correct in showing only 55 per cent for Carter, it is very likely that suburban Catholics gave a majority for Ford," he said.

A corporate president on TV, Ryan is a rancher at heart

by Vernon Scott

Mitchell Ryan, corporate president Don Walling in the new "Executive Suite" series, is as far removed from the pressures of high finance as an actor can get.

Ryan and his wife, Linda, live on a five-acre horse ranch in the wilds of the Santa Monica mountains some 40 miles from Hollywood.

The rural, sparsely settled area is dotted with oak trees — some of which are 200 years old — chaparral and natural springs. It is rustic and unspoiled by fences and other inroads of civilization.

Ryan's pre-World War II house is decorated with a mixture of elegant antiques and comfortable modern furniture. His study is adorned with a 150-year-old German desk and a handsome old sideboard.

He is an amateur oil painter and has hung some of his better landscapes and abstracts around the house. Linda sketches in charcoal and ink. Some of her works, too, are on display.

But it is the great outdoors which fascinates the Ryans. They have seven saddle horses, which Linda rides in shows. She also teaches riding and jumping on the property, which includes a small training ring.

They muck out the stables, groom the horses, repair fences and even grow some of their own vegetables.

In addition to the horses, the Ryans' have six mongrel dogs and a dozen cats. Most of the pets were dropped off by motorists, leaving the animals in the nearby wilderness to fend for themselves.

On Saturdays, Mitch and Linda frequently ride their horses 16 miles round trip to Malibu over deserted trails through some of Southern California's most scenic country.

During the week, Ryan leaves home at 6 o'clock every morning for the 45-minute drive to MGM studios where the CBS-TV series is filmed. He usually has a cup of coffee during makeup sessions. After the noon lunch break it is a long time before dinner.

He seldom returns home before 7 p.m. Linda waits dinner for him but generally feeds young Tim, her 9-year-old son by a previous marriage, earlier.

The Ryans think their life style provides a perfect Tom Sawyer existence for the youngster who spends most of his time barefoot and out of doors. He is easily the best horseman in the family.

Because "Executive Suite" has such a large cast, Ryan usually has one or two days off during the middle of the week. On those days he helps Linda with her equitation and jumping classes.

"Doing all the chores around the place is great therapy for me," says Ryan. "When you're doing that kind of work there isn't much time for nervous pressure.

"I don't want to make a lot of money. And I don't have any desire to get into a great big career. I like to live simply and enjoy my life."

The contrast between his role in the series and his off-screen life is enormous. Around the ranch he wears denims, cowboy boots and open shirts. On the show his wardrobe consists of $300 suits and plush surroundings.

A native of Cincinnati who grew up in Louisville, Ky., Ryan is a straight shooter. His voice is deeply resonant. He is the sort of man who looks you in the eye and says exactly what he thinks.

He is unpretentious and as much at ease on the ranch, but obviously more content in the country.

The distance between the Ryan home and those of their friends precludes frequent entertaining. As he likes to say, "You know you've got a good friend if he comes out this far for a visit."

Linda, who hails from Arizona, is an excellent cook who excels at Mexican dishes. But when the Ryans do have a dinner party it usually features Mitch at the barbecue, with steaks or chops.

Given an alternative life style, anything from a mansion in Bel Air to an island paradise in the South Seas, Mitchell Ryan would stay where he is, doing what he's doing.

"There's no way I would change places with the man I play on the show," says Ryan. "He lives in a pressure cooker. I don't."

Randolph Mantooth

Q. Where was Randolph Mantooth of "Emergency" born? How old is he? Where can I write to him? Also, please print a picture of him. D.F.

A. Randolph, the son of a full-blooded Seminole was born in Sacramento, California on September 19, 1945. You can write him at National Broadcasting Company, Press Department, 30 Rockefeller Plaza, New York, N.Y. 10020.

Q. Is Red Skelton still active in show business or has he retired? C.A.

A. He's very much active, still touring with his live show. He's also working on his autobiography.

Q. Is the Captain of "The Captain and Tennille" bald? J.M.

A. No. He got used to working with his hat on when he was the accompaniest for the Beach Boys. Now it's become his trademark.

Baretta and Fred

Q. Would you please print a picture of Baretta and his cockatoo? And would you please print Baretta's address. S.M.

A. Write Robert Blake at, ABC Press Relations, 1330 Avenue of the Americas, New York, New York 10019. We think the cockatoo took a better picture than Blake.

Q. Why doesn't James Brolin have a TV series of his own? I thought he was great on "Marcus Welby" and he deserves a chance.

A. Brolin is out of TV by choice. He wants a movie career. His first starring role in "Gable and Lombard" was a flop, but he's looking at other roles.

Right now millions of Americans are being forced to sit back and rock their lives away. Simply because they're older. Stop and think about it!

It's going to happen to you. You're going to be "older" someday. Maybe sooner than you think.

And you're going to have to face the same problems that exist today. Unless you start changing your attitudes about aging now. Get rid of your stereotypes.

Try and imagine what you'll be like. What you'll want to do. What you'll want to contribute. That's all we ask.

If you don't want to take your old age sitting down, get off your rocker and separate the facts from the myths.

Now.

The Lambs Farm where holiday spirit has a special meaning and dreams come true

by Genie Campbell

In the frenzied, mad shopping spree that annually precedes the holidays, the real backbone of Christmas — love — is too often unconsciously brushed aside. Who really has time?

That's not the case at The Lambs Farm in Libertyville. There is always time, reassurance and kind words. At this time of year the holiday spirit is just an extra sugar coating sprinkled on the seven shops and businesses operated by the mentally retarded.

It consists of more than the decorations and tinsel, though that is plentiful too, as the Lambs Bakery turns out homemade dough ornaments, the Farmer's Market its jellies and jams and the Silk Screening Shop its colorful Christmas cards with short, but meaningful messages.

The love and spirit at Lambs Farm is year round. It's the happiness of people readily accepted working at their own speed, feeling useful and needed. You don't see it. You can't put your finger on any one thing. But it's there. And no material gift in the world, no matter what the price, can duplicate that warmth.

"The secret to all of it is love," said Bob Terese. He and Corinne Owen co-founded Lambs Farm more than fifteen years ago to employ mentally handicapped adults.

They watched their concept grow from a pet shop on State Street to a 49-acre petting farm, shops and buffet-styled restaurant located immediately off the Rte. 176 exit of the Tri-State Tollway.

There are currently 76 mentally retarded young adults participating in The Lambs work program. Thirty-four live on the premises in a new dormitory that looks more like a continuous row of houses. The dormitory was dedicated last spring by Mrs. Gerald Ford. Already there is a waiting list for the second.

"That building is a happy home," said Terese who urges Chicago area residents to visit Lambs Farm year round. Those who do — come back often.

"I thought I would be depressed coming out here," said one woman who, ashamed of her fears, came anyway grateful she had. The day, she concluded, had been a happy one, an uplifting experience.

"There are still misconceptions. We have to educate the people that mentally handicapped and mentally ill are not the same. The mentally retarded are loving and kind. They just can't work as fast as you and I, but here we make allowances for that. It's what the world is all about — concern for others," said Mrs. Owen.

Work goes on as usual in the pet shop which sells puppies, canaries, parrots, hamsters and gerbils and in the bakery that daily turns out cheese bread, fruit pastries and huge melt-in-your-mouth butter cookies.

At the Farmer's Market, Steve will be most disappointed if you don't take time out to sample his homemade preserves.

It is ironic that the people who are most afraid of seeing the retarded, often fail to notice them at all. They are hard at work. Yet, unlike other commercial businesses, the employes always have time for a smile, a friendly greeting. They're happy and they like to show it.

Those going home to visit with their families for Thanksgiving were told they didn't have to come back on Friday. But most of them did anyhow. They had a job to do.

Receiving a paycheck is only a minor reward. Many forget to even cash it.

"Everyone is a success in what he or she can do. There is a need; we combine that need with usefulness and self respect. Out of it comes love and that's still the greatest motivating force — not money," said Terese.

"We take the exception and make it the rule," added Mrs. Owen.

Concern and patience are the key ingredients. They are the biggest assets of Mrs. Owen and Terese. Perseverance is another.

Mrs. Owen, who has three children of her own, was a music teacher who began volunteering part time at a school for the mentally retarded. Terese, a former physical education instructor, began driving a bus for the school, in order to earn extra money. Becoming close to the children, he began teaching too.

The two gradually became concerned with finding a meaningful outlet for the mentally retarded adult, those eighteen years or older who were no longer eligible or required to go to school.

And then one day when they were playing store with a bookcase filled with grocery items, one of the students provided the answer.

"Wouldn't it be wonderful if we really did have a store," he said.

In 1961 the Lambs Pet Shop first opened at 913 N. State St. It employed more than thirty retarded young people in two shifts. Still, not everyone could be accommodated who desired work.

A dairy farm went up for sale in Liberty-

A backgammon boom is sweeping the nation as commoners take over an upper class favorite

by Diane Mermigas

The Roman Emperor Claudius enjoyed playing backgammon in his chariot when he wasn't busy building an empire.

Thomas Jefferson found backgammon a stimulating diversion from writing the Declaration of Independence.

It seems that players have their own, unique reasons for becoming addicted to the board game, whose roots can be traced back to the earliest of civilizations.

The Egyptians played a form of backgammon just as the Greeks did after them, and although the origin of the game is unknown, it seems to be as old as man's desire for challenge and his love of wagering.

A game that blends skill with strategy and chance, backgammon almost exclusively has been a favorite of the upper class and was reserved only for royalty in some parts of the world centuries ago.

But, today, anyone and everyone is putting their fifteen silk-smooth discs on the board and moving them along the twenty-four alternately colored points to victory.

The modern-day backgammon boom, which knows no social bounds, is largely accredited to Prince Alexis Obolensky, a backgammon whiz who belongs to one of twelve ruling Russian families who fled their homeland during the revolution.

The Prince, or "Oby" as backgammon enthusiasts call him, sponsored a backgammon tournament in 1964 as a promotional stunt for a Bahaman hotel. The event sparked a renewed interest in the game and lead to the birth of the World Backgammon League which now boasts millions of members and at least fifty charter clubs in the United States.

In restaurants and hotel banquet rooms all over Chicagoland every night of the week, it's possible to find entire families, swinging singles, the casual blue jean set and the more elegantly clad pondering over the backgammon board.

Most players say they are attracted to the game because of the challenge involved and the social opportunities that go hand-in-hand with regular tournament play.

The board is a battlefield where two opponents endeavor to block each other and advance their own men until they have all been cleared from play.

The object of the game sounds easy enough, but the unpredictable roll of the dice can muddle the game of even the most accomplished backgammon player.

The element of chance makes it possible for the novice to beat a champion, and it has happened. but, the more experienced and skilled player will ultimately win out, most players say.

As if the basic game wasn't enough to handle, Americans invented the "doubling cube" during the turn of the century which allows either player at any time to raise the stakes up to 64 times the original bet.

While there are plenty of jet-setters who play for five-digit stakes, most players pass-off significant betting and support the game for the fun of it.

Socializing is a main reason for the growing popularity of backgammon. While it takes only two to play, backgammon lovers almost always gather in crowds because the average 15 minute game allows for the switching of partners and the mingling of personalities.

"I come out to play the game and meet new people. It's a lot of fun and fast moving," said Linda Simon, a Chicago resident who frequents Monday night tournaments at Lincoln Park's Belden Stratford Hotel.

Anywhere from seventy to two-hundred people gather for the evening tournaments sponsored by the National Backgammon League, one of two main organizations that promote the game in the Chicago area.

The Monday night tournaments attract mostly singles in their twenties and thirties who sit at long tables with foam-heavy mugs of beer or glasses of frothy mixed drinks, laughing, talking loudly and sometimes only staring in deep concentration over the backgammon boards.

Whether expert or amateur, the backgammon player is a soldier of fortune, a gambler, a social mover, a computer and a wizard who moves quickly and with great confidence.

His tactics are the kind that have won wars, while his luck is the kind that has turned a pauper into a millionaire overnight on Wall Street.

There's a chance for a 'blot' and a backgammon player ponders the best strategy.

Even the best of players can stand to brush up on their technique. Sargis Serges of Arlington Heights does so in preparation for a game on a personalized board he constructed.

The contestants are cool but eager to begin as they square off. Then, one player drops the dice into his cup, swishes them around like a fine wine, and with an authoritative shake sends them tumbling onto the board.

Wild computation begins even before the dice settle in place as the player weighs his own position against the roll of the dice and the probability of his opponent's next move.

The skill and good fortune of only one player will triumph in the end and, perhaps, be rewarded with a little something from his opponent's pocketbook.

"I'm hooked on the game. It's by far the most interesting and exciting two-person game there is," said Sargis Serges, of Arlington Heights and a member of the Backgammon Club of Chicago.

Serges has become so proficient at the game since first learning it two years ago, that he placed third in an invitational tournament which the club sponsored in Chicago this summer.

Serges not only "loves" to play backgammon, but takes pride in hand-making backgammon sets for members of the exclusive, Chicago Gold Coast Club.

An interior designer by trade, Serges combines colors and materials for his backgammon sets that cannot be found in the ready-made game boards that sell in stores for as little as $25. But then the price tags on Serges sets run $200 and up.

Where backgammon has given Serges a new hobby, it has provided others like Simon Naim with a full-time job.

Naim is a professional backgammon player who learned the game as a boy in his native Israel. He plays with the National Backgammon League and uses the prize money from regional and national tournaments he has won to support his university studies in Chicago.

"It's the greatest feeling in the world to be playing in the winner's circle during a big tournament. That's why it's so great to play backgammon here in America. In this country, it's the challenge that counts and everybody loves a winner."

Everyone seems to find his own challenge in backgammon.

Steve Blanchard, winner of a recent marathon tournament sponsored by the National Backgammon League and the American Cancer Society, got his kicks by setting a new Guinness Book world record with 83 hours of continuous play.

Most of his peers couldn't figure him out since many of the tournament players found themselves falling asleep in their seats at the backgammon board and in hallways and taxicabs while they were on their way home from the exhausting event.

"There's an awful lot of mental fatigue that you go through when you play in those tournaments," said Star Christopher, a member and instructor for the Backgammon Club of Chicago.

"The game involves a lot of concentration and it really gets your adrenalin going. When you finally get up from the board, you feel like you've been hit by a car if you've been playing for a white," said Ms. Christopher, a Des Plaines resident.

There are people like retired Sergeant Major Pierre LaRoux who can't seem to get enough of the game.

LaRoux, the author of several books on backgammon, reportedly played 31,576 solo games while patroling the upper Yukon Territory some years back.

He explains in one of his books about how his hands unconciously moved the pieces around the board.

"My hands took on their own distinct personalities. The right hand was reckless, blotted audaciously and doubled whimsically. The left was statistical, cool and detached."

And there are those who won't play for less than $5 a point and sometimes play for as much as $50. The highest rolling game on record took place in Britain where contestants played for $10,000 a point which came to a final pot of $600,000.

There are players of great extremes, but there is room for them all in Chicago's two major backgammon organizations.

Both the Backgammon Club of Chicago and the National Backgammon League require dues which entitles their members to weekly tournaments, instruction, seminars, chartered trips, newsletters and discounts on backgammon paraphernalia.

Each organization gives its players the chance to advance gradually to tougher divisions of play, based on ability, and to accumulate master points from regular tournaments.

Each group also allows its best players to battle it out on the boards at an annual brouhaha where the winner usually walks away with a hefty sum of money that is always matched with a donation for charity.

While the basics of the two organizations are similar, the members are not.

The estimated 350 members of the Backgammon Club of Chicago are largely Lake Shore Drive jet-setters who meet several times each week in the plush surroundings of Maxim's de Paris in the Astor Towers Hotel.

The players snack from a menu specially designed for the club in a dimly-lit room done in deep colors and trimmed with peacock feathers. The evening's conversation volleys from compliments on new outfits and comments about posh gatherings of the past to intriguing moves on the backgammon board.

Those interested in joining the club must complete an application form that asks for their employer's name, their job title and at least two references. The candidate must receive a vote of approval from the club's board of directors before he's given the right to pay $160 in dues the first year and $100 in dues each following year.

"We would like to see the popularity of the game grow, but we are also interested in keeping our membership limited. It's more intimate this way," said president Valerie Valentine who launched the club in 1973 after she learned the game from a friend and was interested in playing on a regular basis with other people.

Jack Schacht was also interested in getting a group of regular backgammon players together when he formed the National Backgammon League in 1974. The original club chapter was in his east Rogers Park neighborhood and about 15 others have since been established in the Chicago area including one in New Town and another in Skokie.

The league has about 2,500 members who pay $60 dues annually. The organization attracts an average of about 100 players to its regular evening tournaments which are Mondays at the Belden Stratford Hotel, Chicago; Tuesdays at the Tower Garden Restaurant, Skokie; Wednesdays at the Holiday Inn in both Northbrook and Oakbrook; Thursdays at the Beef Steak Inn, Chicago and Fridays at the Sheraton North Shore Inn, Northbrook and at the Boul-Mich Building, Chicago.

"Backgammon has always been a jet set game, but I think we have helped to popularize it and break the class barrier. The doors are open and now everyone is playing in our regular tournaments," Schacht said.

movie guide

Designed to help readers decide which movies they want to see, this guide includes a listing of movies currently playing in the Northwest suburban area plus capsule summaries and comments based on reports of the Independent Film Journal, for selected films of interest to readers.

"Bugsy Malone" — Ingeniously conceived, beautifully mounted musical parody of the 1930s gangster film genre, played in perfect scale by an all juvenile cast. A great technical achievement with a rousing musical score by Paul Williams. Should delight adult and child alike. (G).

"Two-Minute Warning" — A sensational, sick film in which a hidden sniper terrorizes the unsuspecting, during a jam-packed championship professional football game in the Los Angeles Coliseum. Star-studded cast is wasted. (PG).

"Norman . . . Is That You?" — Redd Foxx and Pearl Bailey discover their son's a homosexual and try their hardest to straighten him out in an extended situation comedy that keeps its sights — and the offensive level of its humor — aimed appropriately low. (PG).

"Carrie" — A hated high school girl (Sissy Spacek) develops supernatural powers and uses them to get revenge on the whole town. Surprise ending rockets everyone from their seats. Also stars Piper Laurie as a religious fanatic. (R).

"The Next Man" — The Saudi Arabian representative to the United Nations falls in love with a beautiful American girl who belongs to an assassination team. Unfortunately there is not enough action to sustain the intrigue. Stars Sean Connery and Cornelia Sharpe. (R).

ARLINGTON — Arlington Heights — 255-2125 — "I Will, I Will For Now" (R) plus "Sherlock Holmes' Smarter Brother" (PG).

CATLOW — Barrington — 381-0777 — "Two-Minute Warning". (R).

MOUNT PROSPECT CINEMA — Mount Prospect — 392-7070 — Theater 1: "Two-Minute Warning" (R); Theater 2: "One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest" (R).

DES PLAINES — Des Plaines — 824-5253 — "Great Scout and Cathouse Thursday" (PG) plus "Norman . . . Is That You?" (PG).

ELK GROVE — Elk Grove — 593-2255 — "Norman . . . Is that You?" (PG).

GOLF MILL — Niles — 296-4500 — Theater 1: "The Next Man" (R); Theater 2: "Bugsy Malone" (G); Theater 3: "Carrie" (R).

PROSPECT — Mount Prospect — 253-7435 — "The Ritz" (R).

WOODFIELD — Schaumburg — 882-1620 — Theater 1: "Marathon Man" (R); Theater 2: "Norman . . . Is That You?" (PG).

PALWAUKEE MOVIES — Prospect Heights — 541-7530 — "Silent Movie" (PG).

TRADEWINDS — Hanover Park — 837-3933 — Theater 1: "One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest" (R); Theater 2: "Amazing Dobermans" (G).

All it takes to learn the game of backgammon is time, good basic instruction and desire.

Once you have the fundamentals under your belt, it's easy.

The necessities of the game are:

- Two players.
- A backgammon board, which can usually be found on the back of most checkerboards.
- Thirty men or checkers, half in a different color.
- A pair of dice and two dice cups.
- A doubling cube, which is an oversized die with the numbers 2, 4, 8, 16, 32 and 64 marked on its faces, used to keep score and jack up the stakes.

The men are set up at the start of the game as shown in the diagram. The board of twenty-four alternately colored points is divided into four quadrants: the upper right being the black home, the upper left being black outer table, the bottom right being the white home and the bottom left being the white outer table.

The middle strip dividing the board into outer and inner tables is called the "bar," and the points closest to it are called "bar points."

In the way the board is set up in the diagram, the contestant with the white men will move his men in a counter clockwise direction from the black home table to his white home table. The contestant with the black men will move his men in a clockwise direction from the white home table to his own black home table.

Players can move one or more of their men from point to point on the numbers they roll with each turn at the dice. You may divide the numbers you roll among two or more of your men, although the moves must be handled separately.

If you spin doubles, you can move double the total number you have rolled.

Players defend the points they occupy by doubling up their men. You have the chance to bounce your opponent's men off the board when you land one of your own men on a point where only one of his men is resting.

If you land on a point occupied by only one of your opponent's men, it's called a "blot," and your opponent is forced to move that man onto the bar.

A player can only re-enter one of his men from the bar into his opponent's home quadrant, and only on open points there that are not occupied by the other player's men. So, you must roll a number between 1 and 6 that will place your man back on an open point in that table.

Blotting is an important feature of the game, because it can turn everything around with just one roll of the dice.

Blotting allows you to keep your opponent from moving all of his men into his home quadrant and moving them off the board, which is the object of the game. But blotting could also work against you. The re-entering of your opponent's men into your own home table makes it easy for him to knock your block off.

Players work basically to get their men into their own home quadrant and off of the board while impeding their opponent's progress. The first one with his players off the board wins.

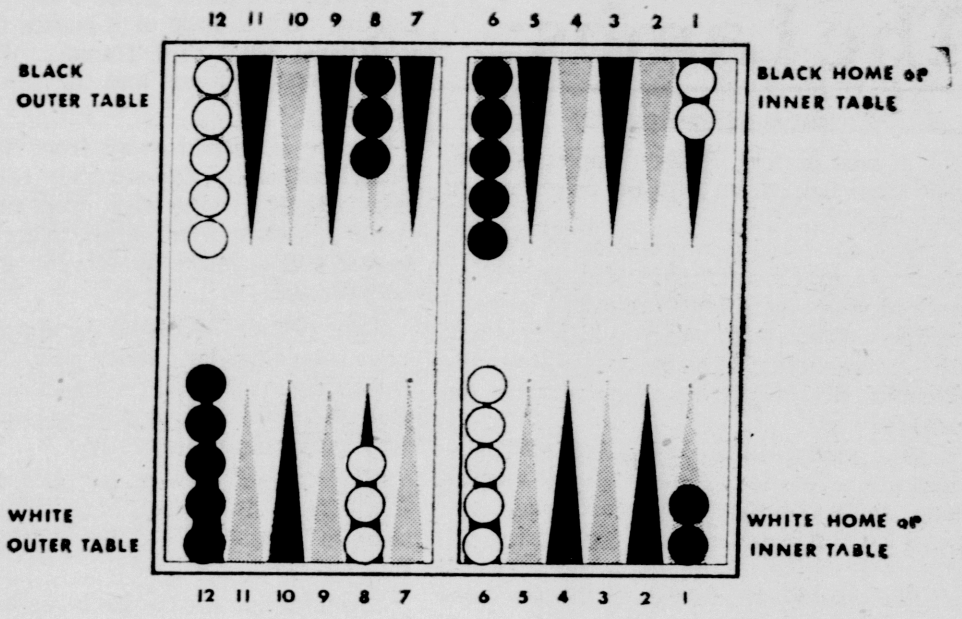
If a player is doing well, he may choose at any time to raise the stakes of the game by turning up numbers on the face of the doubling cube. It allows for the raising of the stakes up to 64 times the original bet. If the other player doesn't feel he can accept the new bid, because his position on the board isn't that good, he forfeits the game at the original stakes.

Knowing whether or not you can afford to accept the increased stakes is an important part of the game, especially for those who play for the big money.

After the basics, it's the strategy of the moves and the probability of positions on the board against the dice and the doubling cube that must be mastered.

The best way to become proficient at the game and familiar with the moves is to play with many different people on a regular basis.

Most accomplished players say backgammon is a simple game to learn but a difficult game to master.



One of the best books for beginners is "The Backgammon Book" by pros Oswald Jacoby and John R. Crawford. The $10 book published by Viking Press is a comprehensive guide on the history, instruction and theory of the game.

It is easy to teach yourself the game from books, although some basic instruction usually is necessary.

Jack Schacht, president of the National Backgammon League, says he can teach anyone enough of the basics in one night to send them out into a novice tournament the next day.

"It's worth the few minutes it takes to learn the game, because once you're playing it, you will probably never stop." — D.M.

park or in cafeterias. People play the game on the train ride home or before dinner. It's becoming more of a common pastime, and I think that's just great."

People like Chicago shoe tycoon Lillian Florsheim were enjoying backgammon in the 1930s before television and other mechanical pastimes came along.

"There's a lot more excitement and glitter to the game today because of the international tournaments and celebrities being involved," said Ms. Florsheim who, in her 80s, is one of the sharpest players around.

"It always has been and always will be a fascinating game because of the challenge and the chance involved, no matter who plays it."

ville. It was perfect. Philanthropist W. Clement Stone helped out with the red tape and financing.

"I like to relate our program to a story about a farmer's son," said Mrs. Owen. "A hundred years ago maybe he didn't learn to read or write, but he could milk a cow and help in the fields. It's the same here. We eliminate the negative and accentuate the positive."

Libby, born with cerebral palsy and under medication for unexpected, severe convulsions, could not cope in a short order food franchise. But she earns her keep pouring coffee and assisting the cooks in the Shepherd Inn. She rattles off history dates like a scholar and spends her spare time drawing pencil sketches and portraits that most people don't have the talent to even attempt.

Though many people in Chicago have yet to visit The Lambs Farm, its reputation is national, even worldwide.

Lambs was recently awarded an educational grant from the Sachem Fund of New Haven, Conn. — $100,000 for three years to teach others to set up similar programs.

Eighteen different states and thirty foreign countries have sent representatives to The Lambs Farm to observe their operation. It is in the true sense, a pilot program.

Though it requires $1,000 a day to run The Lambs, "not a dime of it comes from state or federal aid," said Terese. "We rely on private contributions and the sale of goods here."

No one is turned away from The Lambs though naturally, the severely retarded are unable to fit into the work program. The two requirements are: being able to get along with people and a desire by the young people to help themselves.

Some of the mentally handicapped at Lambs have been placed in outside jobs. One resident is working in a post office, another at a bakery. One is employed part time unpacking china for a major department store.

"If a person can go out and find work, that's great. But I feel there is just as much success in making cookies here in our own bakery," said Mrs. Owen.

The future of The Lambs is made of dreams but Terese and Mrs. Owen have both faith and a knack for making those dreams come true. Another dormitory is desperately needed and both would one day like to see a Senior Lambs to accommodate the employes as they grow older.

No doubt it will happen. The success of the current operation dictates it. And if you're not sure, heed Mrs. Owen's dare.

"Just try to walk into the bakery and not smile."

A young man minds the store at The Lambs bakery ready to assist his customers.

Spend a day at The Lambs

Is there an alternative to fighting the weekend mobs this holiday season at area shopping malls?

Sure there is. At Lambs Farm you can find unique, inexpensive gift items and have fun at the same time — like beginning the day with an old-fashioned farm-style breakfast or topping it off with a hay or sleigh ride depending on the weather.

At the Farmer's Market, one of seven businesses operated at the Farm, homemade jams, peanut butter, peanut brittle, apple butter, cheese balls and sausages are available. You can purchase an assembled gift or make one up yourself. Gifts will be mailed upon request.

And while you're making up your mind over which preserves to buy — strawberry, blueberry, black raspberry or peach — there is Wassail, the hot English Christmas drink, to sample.

In the Silk Screen Shop, Christmas cards and note paper are made while you watch while the Bakery this time of year is turning out dough ornaments and a special assortment of Christmas cookies, walnut and chocolate kuchens, fruit cakes and pumpkin loaves. The Gift Shop is filled with decorating ideas, Christmas wreaths and centerpieces.

Be careful of the Pet Shop. Puppies are hard to resist — especially at Christmas time. And The Lambs is offering a free Golden hamster with purchase of a Habitrail.

Holiday activities have been planned especially for children Dec. 11-12 and again Dec. 18-23 during Farm hours, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

In the cozy Shepherd Inn Restaurant, the former farmhouse, Santa Claus will visit and hand out gifts to all children while adults enjoy a homemade breakfast or dinner buffets offered on Saturdays and Sundays. Caroling by the "young people" of the Lambs will entertain diners daily from 11:30 a.m. to 2 p.m.

All shops are open seven days a week except the Shepherd Inn which is closed on Fridays.

Lambs Farm is located at the junction of the Tri-State Tollway (I-94) and Rte. 176. For information: 362-4636. — G.C.

Two of these three men are...Bald

Which one IS NOT wearing a LifeLike® hairpiece?

As you can see, the natural appearance of LifeLike haripieces let them defy detection. It is this truly "lifelike" appearance that gives LifeLike wearers a great sense of confidence under even the most rugged athletic activities including swimming, tennis or skiing. Because each hair is individually implanted and angled the same way natural hair grows, it acts the same as natural hair when wet, in wind, while sleeping or even when it's messed up.

Perhaps you've thought about wearing a hairpiece, but have reservations because of the bad ones you've seen. Remember, it's only the bad ones you see. The high quality, properly matched and fitted LikeLike hairpiece is simply not noticed.

If you're tired of looking like the guys on the bottom, drop into House of Hair and let George show you the amazing, patented LifeLike product. It you're like thousands of other men, you will experience one of the greatest and most exciting changes a bald man can have.

A loaf of bread, a glass of wine and WOW . . .

Brace yourself — you are about to have a gastronomic experience

by Katherine Rodeghier

(Information for this article was gathered during a press tour of France sponsored and financed by the French Government Tourist Office and Trans World Airlines. Information was also supplied by Foods and Wines From France, Inc., in New York).

PARIS — It begins innocently enough. You enter a quiet little restaurant and are shown to a table eleganly draped in white cloth illuminated by the soft glow of candle light.

At the waiter's suggestion you order the specialties of the region starting with a light white wine and a loaf of fresh bread.

What follows is likely to be a highlight of your trip to France, a meal that will bring back mouth-watering memories many months later. France is a land full of gastronomic delights where dining is a sensual experience seducing even the most unsophisticated palate.

Nowhere else in the world is fine cuisine so highly regarded. French cooking is truly a work of art as dear to the hearts and stomachs of the Frenchman as the treasures of the Louve. Visitors in France should surely take time from sightseeing to sample these delicacies. Some may be tempted to skip the Eiffel Tower altogether to spend their entire stay exploring the palaces of culinary pleasures.

If France is the land of gastronomy then Paris is the culinary capital of the world. Visitors will find more than 12,000 restaurants to choose from, more than any other city in the world, ranging from the famous restaurants of haute cuisine where you will pay $25 and up to small, simple bistros where you can get a memorable meal for around $3. For a quick bite there are brasseries which are a mixture of a restaurant and bar often associated with a beer company, cafes where you can enjoy a snack or sandwich while enjoying the Parisian atmosphere, patisseries which often haye a few tables and chairs where you may be tempted to make a meal of French pastries and coffee, and street stalls offering crepes, waffles and roasted chestnuts.

Most of the restaurants in France serve meals from noon to 2:30 p.m. and from 7 to 9 p.m. Dining late in the evening is fashionable in the larger cities and it is important to reserve your table as much in advance as possible. Most restaurants add a service charge of 12 to 15 per cent to your bill. If service is not included the usual tip is about 15 per cent of the bill and it is customary to tip the wine steward (sommelier) separately.

Menus vary from the deluxe printed type to a mimeographed version of the specialties of the day to a handwritten bill of fare. If you wish to be daring order a la carte or select from the fixed price menu where all courses are included in one price. Some restaurants also offer a menu touristique, usually a three course moderately priced meal designed especially for tourists.

If you are uncertain what to order ask the waiter (garcon) about the restaurant's specialty dishes. Of course wine is served with French meals and very often two wines are served, one to go with the appetizers and one with the main course. It is appropriate to ask questions about the wines but generally white wine goes with white meat, fish and "light" dishes while red wine goes with red meat and "rich" entrees. In smaller restaurants a "vin ordinaire" is usually proper.

Choosing a wine is almost a game in France and there are certain rituals that are followed. The waiter should show you the bottle before it is opened and once the cork is removed he may offer it to you for inspection. Some wines may be left open for a few minutes allowing them to "breathe." The waiter will pour some in your glass for sampling. If you are a connoisseur you will hold the glass to the light to take in the color, sniff the wine to capture its bouquet, take a small sip and cast a knowing glance to your table partner before expressing your approval.

One more tip about dining in France — be patient. The French look forward to meal time as a highlight of their day, a time to relax and enjoy. The chefs take great pride in their creations, preparing dishes with an artistic flourish. One of the reasons that the food is so outstanding is that the dishes are made from scratch and are prepared fresh rather than from precooked portions. This takes time. Allow yourself about one and a half to two hours for lunch and two or three hours for dinner.

A typical French meal consists of an hors-d'oeuvre, main dish, salad, cheese, and dessert. An aperitif may be taken before a meal, followed by one or two wines served with the courses, and a coffee or liqueur following the meal. The French believe that excessive drinking before meals destroys the taste buds and many also frown on smoking between courses for the same reason. It is customary to drink coffee only after a meal and it is served black unless specifically ordered with milk (au lait).

French foods are so diverse and so numerous that one could spend years discovering them but a few examples may serve to whet the appetite. Hors-d'oeuvres are often pork delicacies, raw vegetables or dishes based on poultry products or fish. In the winter the evening meal often starts with soup. Pates, omelettes, fondue, escargots and bouillabaisse are a few "starters" often appearing on menus.

Fish, beef and poultry often make up main course entrees. France is rich in stock raising regions so there is an excellent selection of meats including the classic chateaubriand. Most main dishes are served with a vegetable garnish — artichokes, cauliflower, asparagus, peas, potatoes, or eggplant. France is famous for mushrooms since it was the French who discovered how to cultivate mushrooms in the late 18th Century.

A variety of salads are served following the main course and just before cheese is served. There are about 365 kinds of cheese in France and often a selection of cheeses are served from a cheese board. Start with a mild cheese and work toward the more highly flavored types. There are fresh cheeses such as cream cheese, hard cheeses like beaufort and cantal, rich creamy cheeses such as saint-paulin and reblochon, camembert type cheeses like brie, strong cheese like munster and moroilles, blue cheeses made with ewe's mile like Roquefort or with cow's milk such as Bresse. Some cheeses contain seasoning such as chives, pepper or caraway. There are some 60 varieties of goat cheeses in France which supplies two thirds of the world's supply of goat cheese.

When it comes to desserts French pastries will certainly be found among the selections along with fresh fruits such as cherries, melon, peaches, pears, and berries in season.

Aperitifs include quinquinas or vermouths, sweet wines, and kir, a white wine mixed with cassis which is a black currant liqueur. After dinner drinks include Cognac, Armagnac, and Calvados. French beers go with certain dishes such as sauerkraut and sausages.

When it comes to the best in French cooking there are two schools of thought, one which says the best cuisine is in Paris, and the other which says the real culinary treasures are to be discovered in the small cities, towns and hamlets in the provinces.

It is true that the provinces do have certain regional specialties which have made them famous in their own right and ot course the wines, which are named for their region, have also earned their respective reputations for excellence.

As they make their way through the provinces travelers can often visit the caves and wine cellars where the wine is processed. Grapes are harvested in the early fall although the exact time of harvest is a bit of a gamble for the grower. If grapes are left on the vine they can soak up more sunshine which produces more sugar and more alcohol when fermented. If the grower waits too long, however, he can ruin his crop. Incidentally several wine experts have said that 1976 may be an outstanding year for wine because the drought that plagued Europe this past summer meant more days of sunshine and fewer days of rain, a good omen for the wine maker. The proof will be in the tasting. Most French wines are available for sale roughly two years after the harvest.

During the harvest pickers clip the grapes close to the vines and deposit them into wooden baskets or plastic containers carried by workers walking up and down the rows. The grapes are carted to the winery where the stems are removed and the grapes are placed in troughs. The grapes are pressed, allowed to ferment and are aged in wooden casks, barrels or in bottles. In the Champagne method, often used to make sparkling wines, the wine is stored in bottles which are turned and tilted by workers over a period of weeks until the sediments gather in the neck of the bottle. The bottle necks are then frozen so when the cork or cap is removed the sediment is "disgourged" before the bottle is corked again.

Wine gets its color from the length of time the juice is in contact with the skins of the grapes. White wines can be made from red grapes that are pressed quickly before the skins are allowed to impart any color.

Even if you don't know a word of French, reading the label on a bottle of French wine can impart some important facts. Most French wine names are basically place name. Burgundy is made in the province of Burgundy, Bordeaux in the wine region of Bordeaux and Chablis is a wine that is named for the district in Burgundy where it is produced. The words appellation controlee on the label are a guarantee by the French government of the origin of the wine. Chateau is the vineyard where the wine is produced, propietaire is the owner of the vineyard and negociant is the wine dealer who may buy, bottle and ship wines. The vintage year is the year of the harvest.

Some of the regional specialties in wine in food include:

• Bordeaux. Located on the Atlantic coast in southwest France, Bordeaux has 36 different districts producing red and white wines all classified as fine wine areas by the French government. The Medoc wines have fine bouquet and long lasting qualities, the Graves region produces elegant white wines, St. Emilion and Pomerol produce full-bodied rich red wines, and the Sauternes-Barsac region has great, sweet white wines. Also produced in this area is Cognac, a brandy made from the distillation of white wine from selected vines. Near Perigord one finds truffles, a type of mushroom called "black diamonds" for their outstanding fragrance and taste. They grow around the roots of oak trees and are gathered by using dogs or sows trained to sniff them out. Further south in the Basque country the specialty is shellfish which are found in the Bay of Biscay and the Gulf of Gascogne. Armagnac, which is often sold in flat, round flasks, known as Basque bottles, is also a brandy made from white wine.

• Languedoc. Mediterranean Languedoc is the largest wine growing area in Europe producing more than a third of French table wines including names such as Clairette du Languedoc, Frontignan, Lunel, St. Jean de Minervois, Fitou and Roussillon. Nearby is Aveyron where Roquefort cheese can be found. This blue-veined cheese is made from ewe's milk and is aged in natural caves. It was the favorite cheese of Charlemagne.

• Cotes Du Rhone. Vineyards line the banks of the Rhone River for about 125 miles producing wines that are heady, robust, vigorous and rich in color. The northern wines both red and white, have a distinct flavor and smooth bouquet. The most famous of the southern wines is Chateauneuf-du-Pape, produced near Avignon where the Popes took up summer residence in New Castle (Chateauneuf) during medieval times. The wine has a deep red color and the highest alcoholic content of any in France. North near Lyon one finds the famous Lyonnaise cooking, a delight for the epicurian. Some dishes found in the region are matelote d'anquille (eel cooked in red wine and onions), poulet aux ecrevisses (chicken with crawfish), tete de cochon roulee et pistachee (rolled pig's head with pistachios) and gateaux de noix (walnut cake).

• Cotes de Provence. Southeastern France has heady red, rose and white wines and is also famous for Banon, a white round cheese that comes wrapped in chestnut leaves. North along the border one finds many fine cheeses produced from cattle graving on the slopes of the French Alps. Fondue is a popular dish here and one also finds the largest of all French cheeses, Emmental, an enormous wheel-shaped hunk of cheese weighing from 175 to 200 pounds. Another specialty of this area is Chartreuse, a green liqueur made from aromatic plants that grow on the wooded slopes.

• Burgundy. The vineyards carrying this name cover some 60,000 acres in Eastern France and contribute 25 per cent of French wine exports. The vine was first cultivated in Gallo Roman times and later developed by monks. The big domains of the olden days have been divided and subdivided as they were handed down through the generations until today there are more than 100,000 individually owned pieces of vineyards. The wines include Beaujolais and Macon, which are both red and white wines; Pouilly-Fuisse and Chablis, white wines; and the great Burgundies of Cotes-de-Nuits and Cotes-de-Beaune.

• Alsace. The Alsatian vineyards are located along the Rhine in the northeastern section of France. The wines are typically bottled in long "flutes" and include dry, white wines such as Riesling, Gewurztraminer, and Muscat d'Alsace. One of the specialties here is a sauerkraut prepared in white wine. About two-thirds of the sauerkraut production of France comes from this region. Pate de Foie Gras en croute, minced veal wrapped in crust, is another popular Alsatian dish. Further west in the Lorraine region the popular dish is Quiche Lorraine, a pastry filled with custard made from fresh cream, cheese and bacon. Other specialties are fruit brandies such as Mirabelle, made from plum; kirsch, made from distilled cherries; and poire William, made from pear. The wines of the region are often a very pale beige rose.

• Champagne. Only the sparkling wine from this region is allowed to use the name Champagne, a wine that dates back to the time of the Roman legionnaires who found the vineyards when they marched into Gaul. The Champagne wine of 2,000 years ago was a red wine and when it threatened to put the wines of Roman Italy to shame the wines were ordered destroyed. Two hundred years later they were replanted and Champagne has flourished ever since. Beginning with the crowning of King Clovis in 496, Reims, the capital of Champagne, became the scene of French coronations and Champagne became the coronation wine.

• Normandy and Brittany. These two fingers of France protruding into the Atlantic are not famous wine growing regions but they are quite well known for their gastronomy. Normandy, in northwest France, is known for its cheeses. Camembert, invented in 1970 by a local dairy maid, is a soft cheese with a flowery crust that is the most widely exported in France. Pont l'Eveque, made since the 13th Century, is a soft paste cheese with washed crust and Livarot, another of the most ancient Norman cheeses, is soft paste with a brownish-red crust that is smooth and shiny. Normandy is also known for Cavados, an alcoholic drink made from apples which is often drunk between courses or following a meal, and oysters which derive their reputation from the Sainte-Vaast's oyster breeding method. Normandy also has one of the most famous breeds of cattle in France which produce rich milk, cream and butter that is used in sauces in many gourmet dishes. The area is especially noted for beef tripe. Further south in Brittany one finds the production of strawberries and vegetables such as cauliflower, artichoke, leeks, potatoes and onions. The region is also famous for gridle cakes which are often sold with roasted sausages and for its poultry production including Cotes-du-Nord, one of the leading breeds of poultry in France.

• Loire Valley. There are more than 500,000 acres of vineyards in the Loire Valley most situated along the Loire River and its tributaries. In the western region around Nantes one finds Muscadet, a dry, light white wine popular in France and abroad. The lively white wines of Sancerre, Reuilly, Pouilley-sur-Loire and Quincy are fragrant and dry. The wines of Touraine such as Bourqueil and Chinon are light red wines with a hint of violets and raspberries, and Vouvray a wine that can be found dry, sweet or sparkling. There are a variety of red and white wines in Anjou and Saumur including the sparkling Saumur wines made in the Champagne method. The region is also known for Anjou pears and apples and for asparagus which grows in the sands along the river. The Loire region has surpassed the Paris area in mushroom production now producing about 100,000 tons per year. §

Here's all you need to know to order like a connoisseur

by Katherine Rodeghier

Don't let those French menus scare you!

The fear of making a mistake when ordering is certainly understandable. You are confronted with a maze of words of foreign fare and are presented with the prospect of ordering blind only to be served some wild concoction looking like nothing you've seen before.

But with a simple lesson in the lingo of French menu madness you too can conquer the fear of flying in the face of French cuisine. Try these translations on for size.

Holiday cruises on the Delta Queen steamboat

Three holiday cruises on the steamboat Delta Queen, will make round trips from New Orleans to Natchez on the mighty Mississippi, a journey through the old South of beautiful plantations, ante-bellum mansions and Civil War battlefields.

The pre-Christmas cruise, December 17-22 provides shoppers with an excellent opportunity to buy unusual Christmas gifts in the New Orleans French Quarter which abounds in antique shops, art galleries and unique boutiques.

There's an old fashioned Christmas on an old fashioned sternwheeler during the December 22-28 cruise. The Delta Queen will be decorated with Christmas trees, pine ropes, lights, holly and mistletoe. There will be a visit from Santa Claus who leaves stocking presents on each cabin door. The Delta Queen will call at Natchez for midnight services on Christmas Eve. This cruise also features a day and a night in New Orleans with the steamboat as hotel.

During the New Year's Cruise, December 28-January 2, there's a New Year's Eve Party with lots of good Dixieland music, noisemakers, streamers, confetti, and surprises. On New Year's Day, television sets will be placed in the Texas Lounge so that no one misses their favorite bowl game.

Tour stops on the holiday cruises include Baton Rouge, St. Francisville, and Natchez.

Fares for the holiday cruises begin at $320 person and include steamboat passage, berth, all meals and entertainment. Further information can be obtained from a travel agent or The Delta Queen Steamboat Co., 511 Main St., Cincinnati, Ohio 45202. Telephone: (513) 621-1445.

Lake Placid, N.Y. plans an action packed winter season

Lake Placid, New York — site of the 1980 Winter Olympic Games, seeks to expand its events and activities each year for its visitors. This winter is no exception with everything on the schedule from softball to bobsledding!

Scheduled for the Dec. 27 weekend is a hockey tournament, international cross country races and the Coronation of the King & Queen of Winter and a spectacular ice show.

The year 1977 is packed with activities beginning with the traditional New Year's Day Ski Jump on Jan. 1. Also scheduled are the North American Bobsled Championships at Mt. Van Hoevenberg. Each succeeding weekend in January will be loaded with events such as the Can-Am Alpine races at Whiteface Mountain on Jan. 5 Biathlon tryouts — Jan. 10 - 11, bobsledding on Jan. 16-17 and the North American Junior and Senior Luge Championships — Jan. 15-16.

The speed skating season opens in Lake Placid on Jan. 22 with the Junior & Senior Olympic races. The Olympic Arena will again see figure skating competitions when the ISIA takes to the ice on Jan. 28-30.

A special weekend is planned Jan. 28 to 30 when Lake Placid and the Price Chopper Stores combine to host the "July in January" Family weekend. Summer events in winter — tennis, softball and golf as well as the traditional winter events combine with theater, a big band sound and fireworks.

February begins with the Lake Placid High School winter carnival featuring hockey, broom hockey, and snow sculpture followed by the Diamond Trophy Outdoor Speed Skating Championships, slalom and giant slalom races, ski jumping and of course the Lake Placid Skating Club's annual winter ice extravaganza "Ice Time '77" set for Feb. 12.

More bobsledding, the Governor's Cup Alpine Ski races at Whiteface Mountain, Diamond Trophy Indoor Speed Skating and two hockey tournaments make up the events schedule for March.

If you are a "doer" rather than a spectator, Lake Placid offers skiing both downhill and cross country, indoor and outdoor ice skating, dog sled rides, sleigh rides, snowmobiling, toboganning and the thrilling bobsled run at Mt. Van Hoevenberg where the public may take a ride for their own "champagne of thrills."

Wildlife book is a treasure for the nature lover

WILDLIFE'S CHRISTMAS TREASURY (National Wildlife Federation, $9.95)

Reviewed by Lea Tonkin

Most everyone has a favorite place to be in winter.

For those who take Christmas walks in the snow and cold, who marvel at the delicately frosted Queen Anne's Lace by the roadside or listen for the chickadees at a backyard feeder, the "Wildlife's Christmas Treasury" offers spirited holiday reading. Beautiful color photos of plants, birds and other wildlife, accounts of holiday legends and selections on everything from choosing a Christmas tree to the making of natural holiday decorations will appeal to those who prefer to remain indoors in wintertime.

The special magic of December days is reflected in contrasting photo-essays produced by five teams of photographers and conservation journalists. From the deserts and mountains of the southwest to Canada geese searching for food at a Massachusetts pond, the portraits of winter wildness are striking.

Photos of the mountains in Washington's Mount Baker National Forest, snow geese at a North Carolina marsh and a winter walk in Minnesota are followed by a Currier and Ives print titled, "Dashing through the snow in a two-horse open sleigh!" In an account of the "Jingle Bells" song, the reader finds that the song was written in 1857 by the Unitarian minister James Pierpont, for the enjoyment of Sunday school students.

The symmetry and beauty of a single snowflake has been captured in photographs taken by Chicago weatherman P.J. Hoff. The snowflakes were put on glass slides, covered with clear plastic, stored in a freezer, and later photographed through a microscope under colored lights.

A nostalgic look at bygone holiday greeting cards depicts owls, a rabbit and other wildlife. The coming of St. Nicholas to America, "The year Santa came late," and "The night of the snowbirds" stories complement features on northland birds and the plants and flowers of Christmas.

Do-it-yourselfers will find instructions for fashioning holiday wreaths, pinecone candleholders and a miniature Christmas tree. A gingerbread Noah's ark filled with animal cookies and whimsical baker's clay critters suitable for Christmas tree decorations also are featured.

A conservation message is found in "Wildlife's Christmas Treasury." The fable written by Rachel Carson, describes a town in America where the abundance and variety of wildlife disappeared, the victims of pesticides.

Success stories highlight efforts to reintroduce caribou in Maine and restore buffalo herds in western lands. Although one writer notes that conservation has been a struggle, "Wildlife's Christmas Treasury" provides colorful proof that a kaleidoscope of natural beauty awaits discovery in the American winter season.

The 160-page book is available only through the National Wildlife Federation. Orders for "Wildlife's Christmas Treasury" may be sent, along with a check for $9.95, to: National Wildlife Federation, 1412 16th St., N.W., Washington, D.C. 20036. Immediate orders are advised for holiday gifts.

Tolkien's 'Letters' the perfect gift for Christmas

THE FATHER CHRISTMAS LETTERS, by J. R. R. Tolkien (Houghton Mifflin, $8.95).

Here is a book that will make the perfect Christmas gift for two kinds of people — those who are fans of Tolkien and "The Lord of the Rings" trilogy and those who have never heard of either the man or his epic.

"The Father Christmas Letters" is a delightful, lavishly illustrated volume which reproduces the letters Tolkien wrote for his children from 1925 through the early 1940s. The letters, written in a shakey hand that is exactly right for the old man of the North Pole, told of Father Christmas's adventures and usually detailed the antics of North Polar Bear, Santa's willing but often clumsy "helper."

The colorful illustrations are also Tolkien's own, for Father Christmas and sometimes North Polar Bear drew pictures for their correspondents to illustrate their letters.

Other characters in the letters include Paksu and Valkotukka, two polar cubs who are North Polar Bear's nephews, red and green elves, and goblins, described by Father Christmas as "very much what rats are to you, only worse, because they are very clever."

Devoted Tolkien fans will bring their knowledge of the dates during which Tolkien was writing the trilogy to their reading of the letters. Some passages in the letters during the late 1930s particularly the last letter, written during World War II, describe battles between Father Christmas and the goblins which are clearly exercises which led to the writing of the great battle scenes of "The Lord of the Rings."

In addition, the tone of the letters change as time passes in much the same way Tolkien's tone changed after he wrote "The Hobbit," a charming children's story, and embarked on "The Lord of the Rings," a work much more likely to captivate adults.

Knowledge of Tolkien's other works, however, is totally unnecessary to enjoyment of this volume. Children will love it and adults who retain any sense of wonder will also enjoy it.

The book may, in fact, find its most delighted buyers among Tolkien fans who have been trying to convert skeptical friends. The book is just 50 pages, easy to read and does not require the same commitment as the three volumes of the trilogy.

However, some readers introduced to Tolkien through this book will doubtless find themselves lured into his longer works.

Once they take the bait, they will probably find themselves life-long fans of the master of fantasy in the 20th Century.

Guthrie's tale of his youth, music and adventures

SEEDS OF MAN by Woody Guthrie (Dutton, $11.95)

Reviewed by Tom Von Malder

During his life, Woody Guthrie several times tried to write about his search, at age 19, with his father, brother and uncle for a silver lode his grandfather found but never mined.

This narrative, mostly written in 1947 and 1948, is the most complete but it too is unfinished. Among the earlier forms was "Silver Mine."

The narrative is part fiction, part autobiography, or as Guthrie wrote, "an experience lived and dreamed." It pulsates with the rhythms of life, particularly with the dialogue, mostly written to reflect the Texas dialects. At the same time though, this form of dialogue is overly wordy and may cause many readers to put down the book without finishing.

For the minimal amount of action in the book — they never find any silver — the pace is very slow. What Guthrie has done is concentrate on life, the lust, adventure and music that filled his youth.

Perhaps the finest section is the opening "Drip Gas," in which Guthrie and companions try to find a leak in a natural gas pipeline so they can fill up their truck. A camaraderie comes through the freezing cold and the near fatal fire.

With Guthrie's earlier autobiography, "Bound For Glory," to be the subject of a movie released this month, this new volume should get a lot of attention. Guthrie was one of America's best folksong writers. But be warned, the large amounts of dialogue written in dialects will slow down your reading.

BEGINNER'S CORNER — Hint and explanation: The black knight is your prey!

A new era in chess is upon us. Youth, women, and even nations are playing the game more and better.

Among women the improvement is marked. Here, U.S. Women's Champion Diane Savereide is on the verge of becoming the first present day U.S. woman master.

Abroad, women's World Champion Nona Gasprindasvili has been breaking new ground in international competition by winning one tournament with a perfect score and tying for second in another one.

But, ironically, when Nona triumphantly returned to the U.S.S.R. to play in the national championship, she found no small number of other women players ready to challenge her.

The surprise result! She finished seventh, losing her title to 19-year-old Anna Aksharimova, a physical education student from Moscow.

The new champion, according to her teacher former World Champion Michael Botvinnik, has a great future, especially because of her tendency to search for original solutions to problems arising on the chess board.

Those chessplayers who were impressed by the East German performance in the World Olympic Games in Montreal (second place and fifty gold medals), may have wondered whether similar results were being attained by that country in chess.

To my own surprise I recently discovered that three East Germans have become international grandmasters in the last two years — a significant feat if you consider that the U.S., a top chess-playing country, has developed only two GM's in the last decade and a half.

Most recently, Lothar Vogt scored his necessary grandmaster 'norm' in the 1976 Capablanca Memorial Tournament in Cienfuegos, Cuba. In Solve-It is a position from a game in that event. We see Vogt win a piece with a series of clever knight moves.

A commemorative cacheted cover marking the anniversary of the birth of Sir Rowland Hill, who introduced the first postage stamp, is being offered by The Philatelic Journalist.

Hill's postal plan was put into effect in Great Britain in 1840, using the famous Penny Black stamp, and was the forerunner of today's mail system. Hill was born on Dec. 3, 1795 and the cacheted cover, franked with the U.S. stamp collecting adhesive (Scott No. 1474), will be cancelled on that day.

Covers are available for $1 each (three for $2.75 or six for $5) from "The Philatelic Journalist, P.O. Box 150-SRH, Clinton Corners, N. Y. 12514." Please enclose a self-addressed, stamped, long envelope for return of your covers.

On Monday, Dec. 6, the Northwest Stamp Club will hold Show and Tell Night where each member presents a page of his stamp collection and explains the history to which it refers.

The meeting begins at 7:30 p.m. at the Arlington Heights Public Library, 500 N. Dunton and guests are welcome.

Club secretary Frank Fischer reports more than 60 youngsters attended the 'Kids Day' Nov. 14. The club realized $30 from proceeds of the Children's Auction where 90 lots of stamps and accessories changed hands, including a 1959 Scott catalog — a single volume containing all the stamps of all the nations.

Stamp notes

by Bernadine M. Rechner

The U.S. Postal System has announced new procedures for ordering first day cancellations will be implemented after the first of the year.

Two options will be available: collectors may continue to have the Postal Service affix the new adhesive and cancel their covers at the first day city, as before, or collectors may purchase the new issue at their local post office and within 15 days, send the stamped cover to the first day city for cancellation.

The second option is similar to the one used by the Postal Service in cancelling the 50 State Flags issue in February. It is expected to simplify the administrative burden of accounting for remittances at the first day site and for affixing the new stamps to collectors' covers.

The Postal Service claims the new procedure will also benefit the collector who, by affixing his own stamps, will have control over centering, perforations and the arrangement of stamps on the covers.

The Australian Post Office has released two Christmas stamps, in 15-cent and 45-cent denominations, and a 25-cent Christmas aerogramme.

An official, serviced first day cover franked with both stamps is 72-cents (Australian) and a souvenir pack containing a mint single of each adhesive is 70-cents — both from "The Philatelic Bureau, Australia Post Office, Box 9000, Melbourne, Victoria, Australia 30001."

Olga knows

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Careless words can result in sticky situation with you, Ari, getting caught in a web of your own spinning. Avoid confrontations with adversary. By the light of the silvery Full Moon, keep secret promise made to loved one.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Domestic life (and strife?) take top billing. Outsider may try to muscle into your private preserve. Head this intruder off at the pass. You know what happens when the camel gets his head inside the tent? Pretty soon . . . no tent! You get the message.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Open your heart to loved one, Gem. Forget old bruises. Week can be fruitful if you remember that all of your tomorrows can depend on how you behave today.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Pressures mount. Try not to be an old grouch, for others observe your reactions with uncommon interest. Full Moon shines on beckoning path. Don't follow. Instead, Moonbaby, blaze new trail of your own. Message clears.

LEO (July 23-August 22): There's a Libra in your future, Leo, whose charm will have you walking into walls. You are fire and Libra is air, and since fire needs air to burn . . . you should count on a warm week. Yes, indeed.

VIRGO (August 23-September 22): Mood of partner/mate apt to be highly volatile. Detente can be achieved by restraint on your part. Saj is in the picture. Should Bacchus crook his boney finger, Virgo, turn thumbs down.

LIBRA (September 23-October 22): Truth dished out this week, Libra, and experience won't exactly be a bundle of laughs. However, you will gain insight into nature of personal problem. Week traipses to an interesting conclusion.

SCORPIO (October 23-November 21): The most important week of your life is not the one just past, Scorp, nor is it one in the distant future. It is this week. It is NOW. Treasure each day as you would a precious gift, for in truth that's what each day is. Week ends on note of joy.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22-December 21): Challenge lies ahead. Keep sneakers handy, Saj, for fancy footwork may be your only salvation. Intrigue knocks. As you open the door (and, of course, you will!) your pulse races. Week ends on key of C for conundrum.

CAPRICORN (December 22-January 19): You and the Full Moon send out strong signals. One who has been a bit difficult turns into an absolute lamb. Others come around to your views. On last day, Cap, you are chooser . . . not beggar.

AQUARIUS (January 20-February 18): This week, Aquari my friend, you are motivated to make important personal decision. Basic changes involved. You catch the passing parade. Rummy-tum-tum.

PISCES (February 19-March 20): Ties that bind tangle. One who is cantankerous can be quieted by tact. Don't exhume old bones. Full Moon takes its toll and by last day, Pisces my love, you are more than willing to settle for a little wry on-the-rocks.

Win at bridge

For our finale about that 1930 match, we have selected a hand that shows one of the improvements we have added to bidding in 45 years of play.

At both tables in that 1930 match South opened one spade. Everyone passed and both Wests opened the jack of hearts.

The play went queen, king, ace and a heart was led right back. West won and shifted to the five of trumps. It went jack-king-ace. Then South led and ruffed a heart.

Opening lead — J ♥

A club lead from dummy produced South's queen and West's ace.

East and West played carefully from then on, but there was no way to keep South from winning four of his five trumps and his two side aces plus that one ruff in dummy for a total of seven tricks.

Why does this hand show the advantage of modern bidding? Because any modern East would reopen with one notrump after the bidding went one spade-pass-pass. This reopening notrump does not show anything like 16-18 points. With that sort of hand East reopens with a double. Instead it shows a hand just like East held. Maybe a point or two higher — maybe a point or two lower, but something between 10 or 11 and 15 points.

One notrump buys the contract and makes rather easily.

Ask the Jacobys

Continuing our answer on revokes, a revoke may be corrected before the offender or his partner plays to the next trick. If a declarer's revoke is corrected an opponent who has played after the revoke may change his play without penalty. If a defender revokes declarer may change his play.
